They're out there in front—the Braves—where, no matter what happens today, they can't be hauled out of the lead. With the final Philly game on their hands, and with the Giants winding up with the Dodgers, the Climbers will rest in first place tonight.

If they are beaten and the Giants win, the Stallings stalwarts will remain out in the fore, a game and a half better off than the Giants.

If they win, they will at the worst still retain their lead of two and a half games over the champions. And if the Giants should happen to drop another game to the Dodgers and the

DIVORCE FOR MRS. TURNBULL

Mrs. Lillian A. Turnbull, who claimed that she was the common law wife of "Lucky" Baldwin, the California millionaire, and fought for years for part of the Baldwin fortune for her daughter, Beatrice Anita Baldwin Turnbull, was awarded a decree of divorce today from her husband, Dr. William B. Turnbull, a Boylston street chiropodist. Judge Dubuque in the Norfolk County Divorce Court at Dedham handed down the decree. The Turnbulls have one child, Thelma, who was awarded to the mother.

The Turnbulls were married in Worcester April 4, 1904. All went well, Mrs. Turnbull testified today, until she found a letter in her husband's coat pocket.

"Well, I read the letter, found it told of a meeting in a Boston hotel, went there and found my husband's name on the register," she testified.

"I told him of my discoveries. He confessed."

Mrs. Turnbull began her fight in 1910 for a share for her daughter of the Lucky Baldwin's $11,000,000 fortune. For two years the fight waged in the California courts. The courts turned down her claim.

Beatrice Anita afterwards went on the stage and made good.

The Turnbulls lived at No. 221 Harvard street, Brookline.

Storekeeper of Roxbury Is Fined

James J. Denehy, No. 5 Clifton street, Roxbury, was in the Roxbury Court today on a charge of giving insufficient weight. His case was filed. He was also fined $10 for selling other than by weight.

Aviators Drop Bombs on German Emperor and Staff

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 11.—Emperor William and the German general staff had a narrow escape from death when French and Belgian aviators dropped bombs upon their headquarters, according to the Daily News, a Dutch newspaper.

It says that despite the fact that the headquarters of the Germans is guarded at night by a fleet of aeroplanes, the Belgian and French fliers succeeded in reaching it and dropped four bombs.

The aerial bombardment caused some damage, the newspaper adds, but no one was killed.

The Daily News locates the headquarters of the Kaiser and the German general staff in Luxemburg, where they are occupying the building of the German legation. Searchlights have been mounted at Luxemburg to prevent any surprise attack upon the legation by the allies' aeroplanes.

GERMANS ARE BEATEN WITH APPALLING LOSS

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.
Staff Correspondent of the American.

PARIS, Sept. 11.—The most furious fighting of the war has been going on between Vitry-le-Francois and Verdun, where the German loss of life is appalling, it is stated in dispatches from the front today. An artillery duel which raged for seventy-two hours was interspersed with infantry and cavalry charges wherein the hand-to-hand fighting equalled for fierceness anything known in modern warfare.

The retreat of the Germans along the Ourcq River after a two days' attempt to pierce the Anglo-French lines, is said by the allies to have developed into a rout.

PARIS SAYS FOE THREW OFF ARMS AND RAN AWAY

The German right wing has been routed by the allies' left, according to triumphant dispatches today from Paris. Berlin goes so far as to admit that the Germans retreated. The Paris dispatches say that the rout was so complete that the German soldiers, sternly disciplined as they are, actually threw away their arms in their headlong flight.

The allies are pressing the Germans furiously on the centre and left of the main battle front. French officers report terrific fighting all along the line. A three-days artillery duel was varied by cavalry dashes and infantry charges, with hand-to-hand fighting of unparalleled savageness.

Diplomatic news today favored the allies. A new Balkan alliance of Roumania, Bulgaria and Greece has been formed to checkmate Turkey. The purpose and strength of this alliance is summarized in a Bucharest dispatch:

BUCHAREST, Sept. 11.—Roumania, Bulgaria and Greece have formed an alliance and have agreed to act together if Turkey declares war on the side of Germany and Austria. A leading diplomat is authority for this and says that agreements have been signed. The Roumanian, Bulgarian and Greek armies are mobilized at strategic points.

A glance at the map shows how effectively such an alliance can block Turkey on the European side. On the question of relative armies and navies the advantage is with the Balkan combination. Greece, Roumania and Bulgaria can muster 1,030,000 men to 700,000 of Turkey and the Turkish fleet of thirty-five vessels is five less than the triple fleets of the alliance.

Significant of the disaster to the German right wing in the battle territory just east of Paris is the official report from the German field headquarters to Berlin and then relayed to the German Embassy at Washington. The dispatch reads:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—News of the retreat of the right wing of the German army, without pursuit by the superior force of the allies, reached the German Embassy in a wireless from Berlin today. The news came in form of the first official report from headquarters and recited that the German flank at the east of Paris, after successful advance, "was retired at the advance of strong hostile columns. The enemy failed to pursue. The retreat of the right wing was ordered just after German troops crossed the Marne River and were proceeding eastward."

Two brief bulletins from the Danish capital today gave the world the first news of a naval battle which is being fought between Russian and German fleets in the Baltic Sea.

The first flash of news was followed by a second, which merely served to locate the engagement a little more definitely. The bulletins were:

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 11.—Newspapers report a naval battle between German and Russian squadrons in the Baltic.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 11.—Danish newspapers state that a naval battle is in progress between German and Russian squadrons off the Aland Islands in the Baltic.

This naval engagement, whose result is yet to be learned, is the answer to the news of yesterday that a German fleet of battleships, cruisers and destroyers, thirty-one in all, had been sighted by Swedish fishermen in the Gulf of Bothnia.

The Aland Islands, where the present naval battle is said to be near, are at the southern end of the Gulf of Bothnia, where the Baltic Sea channel is not over 150 miles wide, from Sweden to Finland.

The islands belong to Finland, which means Russia. The group consists of the largest island of Bomarsund and a litter of smaller islands between Bomarsund and the Finnish coast. Bomarsund is listed as a former fortress, but in Russia's great naval preparations of the past two or three years it may have been equipped as a naval base. It is of very irregular shape, with large bays and indentations which would afford a fleet admirable hiding place, either for shelter or from which to plan a dash on an enemy.

FLEET MYSTERY SOLVED.

According to reports from Stockholm and from Christiania, the German fleet went up in these waters to intercept Swedish passenger steamers which were suspected of taking across the Gulf of Bothnia a number of Russians who had been recalled for army service. The Russian fleet apparently went up there to stop this and the battle ensued.

There has been much speculation as to just what the Kaiser's Baltic fleet was doing since it withdrew from the coast waters between the mouth of the Elbe and Helgoland. Part of the fleet was reported as hugging the safe retreat of the Elbe estuary. Later it was reported that some of the vessels had gone back through the Kiel Canal to the lower Baltic, where they were when the war started.

Yesterday Stockholm, which is about 100 miles southwest of the Aland Islands, sent out a dispatch that thirty-one German battleships, cruisers and destroyers had been seen steaming eastward in the Gulf of Bothnia by Swedish skippers. It was presumed that the German vessels meant to harass the Finnish coast or possibly to draw out the Czar's Baltic fleet from the Gulf of Finland.

Early today, however, the real errand of the Kaiser's squadron was revealed when dispatches from Christiania, via London, said that the Germans were holding up the transportation of Russians from the Scandinavian peninsula over to Russia.

There is a Swedish steamship service between Gefle and Raumo. Gefle is on the eastern coast of Sweden. Raumo is a small Finnish port directly opposite Gefle on the eastern side of the Gulf of Bothnia. The two ports are less than 250 miles apart. A line drawn between them would pass 100 miles north of the Aland Islands.

The German squadron, according to the early dispatches from Christiania today, held up at least one Swedish steamship, searched it and took off a number of passengers as prisoners, including thirty-six Englishmen. But the search was really for Russians. Any Russians in the Scandinavian peninsula who wished to get back to the colors in a hurry would naturally take one of those Bothnian Gulf transportation lines as the quickest way.

DEFIED CZAR'S SHIPS.

The first glance at the map of the Baltic Sea and the Finnish and Bothnian gulfs shows that the moment the Kaiser's fleet passed north of Stockholm it was deliberately exposing itself to attack by the Czar's Baltic fleet. The distance from Stockholm across to Hango Head, the southern extremity of Finland, is less than 300 miles and the width of the marine gateway to the Bothnian Gulf is much less in the neighborhood of the Aland Islands.

The naval battle which is being or has been fought off the Aland Islands may be terrific, for the Kaiser's fleet alone is reported as numbering thirty-one battleships, cruisers and destroyers.

Reports today from the operations on land brought the Russian-German-Austrian engagements in Eastern Europe right to the fore, with a possible lessening of the reported Russian triumphs. A delayed dispatch from Vienna quotes the Austrian War Office as saying that matters are merely getting to the decisive point in Galicia now. How the Austrian statement differs from the Russian reports is apparent by reading the dispatch:

VIENNA, Sept. 10 (delayed in transmission).—Austrian troops in Galicia are engaged in the first decisive battle since the war with Russia began, the War Office said today.

Koenigsberg, the important fortified German port on the BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Sept. 11.—Official announcement was made here today that the allies, reinforced by fresh troops, had taken the offensive against the German armies in France and that the latter's outposts had fallen back upon their supports.

It added that the withdrawal of the outposts, after advancing between Meaux and Montmiral, had been made in good order, and that the allies, despite the superiority of their numbers, had failed to pursue with any energy.

(This is a flat contradiction of a Central News dispatch from Amsterdam stating that General von Stein of the German general staff had admitted that the allies captured fifty guns and thousands of prisoners.)

The War Office today issued a formal denial of reports that the Russians had taken many prisoners at Lemberg, had surrounded the Przemysl fortress and were marching on Cracow.

BRITISH CAN FIGHT, SAY GERMANS

GREAT PRAISE FOR COURAGE OF BRITONS

By FREDERICK WERNER.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Sept. 11.—Although England is the hated foe of Germany, all the wounded German soldiers who are brought back from the theatre of conflict pay the highest tribute to the courage and fighting qualities of the British.

BRITISH GREATEST OBSTACLE.

It is the British who have offered the greatest obstacle to the German army on its march toward Paris.

Another batch of wounded officers and soldiers has arrived from the front. They came through from Belgium by train, and every man is impatient to get back upon the firing line. For the moment they are the heroes of the city and tender hands are caring for their wounds.

Lieutenant Frederick Von Scheidling, one of the officers brought to Berlin for treatment, told me something about the trip of the German army across Belgium. His men faced British and French soldiers, and even the wild Algerians, but of all the fighting men opposing the German lines, he said, the British proved the most dangerous.

All of the wounded officers and privates who are sent back into Germany or are left in improvised military hospitals along the way are warned not to give out any information which might be of value to the enemy. They cannot discuss the locations of troops, but they can say all they want to about personal experiences in battle.

BELGIANS SURPRISED THEM.

"We got our first taste of fighting at Liege, and we got a whole mouthful," said Lieutenant Von Scheidling. "It is not betraying any secret to say that the vigor of the Belgian defenders surprised us. But we knew that the forts at Liege could not stand against our big siege guns when we finally got them to the front. They were so enormous in size that they could be moved only very slowly and then it was the policy of the general staff to keep them behind the front, so that if we ran into a hostile army and had to fall back for a strategic reason our heaviest artillery would not have been left behind.

"My regiment was before Liege about ten days, and as I rest here where it is so quiet and peaceful and look back over those days they seem like a nightmare. The thunder of guns echoed in my ears day and night, and it seemed that the smell of gunpowder was never out of my nostrils. The sight of dead and wounded and the cries of those in agony sickened me. I was mighty glad when my regiment was sent forward. I did not know exactly where we were going, but suspected that we were going to take Brussels.

"I was in the fighting at Diest and near Haelen, where the Belgians raked us with their machine guns. We were kept going forward at a furious pace. Some days we covered ten to fifteen miles, and when you figure that we were passing through a hostile country, where the enemy had taken every possible opportunity to bar our way and where we were constantly being attacked by non-combatants and were in danger of being ambuscaded, this speed is nothing short of marvelous.

CARRIED NINETY POUNDS.

"Each soldier carried ninety pounds of equipment; the weather was hot and the roads were deep with dust and were into ruts by the cavalry and artillery wheels.

"We fought our way past the Belgians and passed through Brussels at sight. It was at Mons that we got our real baptism of battle. The British and Algerines were out in front there, supported by the French artillery. We were under a terrific fire all the time. All the charges of the Algerines were absolutely murderous. These black soldiers worship warfare and believe death in battle assures eternal happiness. When they fight they are virtually insane.

"It was evident that we had to break the British lines or lose all the advantage we had gained up to date. Those British soldiers did not fight like men. They fought like devils. They charged through artillery fire that swept mighty holes in their lines and climbed over the cannon to get at our gunners. Fighting was a business proposition of the most serious nature for them.

SILENT AND DOGGED.

"Silently and doggedly they moved forward. It was all the same to them whether they were passing across a shell-swept upland or beneath the shelter of their own guns. The German generals believed in keeping the enemy constantly in action and often we attacked after they had begun to give way. They were not dismayed. They fell into battle formation and fought, and whether they had to fall back themselves or whether we fell back they showed the same persistent grimness.

"It was shortly after we left Mons and while we were pounding away night and day at the slowly retreating allies that I got a bullet in the thigh. It was an Englishman who got me. I was taken first to Namur for treatment; then brought here. I hope to get back into France soon, for with the English defending Paris there is work for every German. If we had only the French against us there would be no cause for worry."

WARNS ALLIES OF TRAP IN GERMAN RETREAT

AFRAID BLOW MAY FOLLOW

By J. L. GARVIN.
Editor of Pall Mall Gazette.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The change at the front is almost too sudden to inspire perfect trust. The German army, which had advanced steadily and irresistibly until September 2, has now begun to fall back. It has not fought a decisive battle. This movement has now continued four consecutive days.

We must not for one moment be deceived. Although we do not know what it is, some formidable counter-stroke is being executed. The German army has not been defeated anywhere yet.

In the centre, where the hardest fighting has been in progress since Tuesday, it is nevertheless plain that the Germans have not exerted their full force. They must be doing something—but what, is an unknown quantity.

Several answers are given. One suggests that the Germans have decided as the least of the evils to force, if they can, the northern section of the barrier chain of forts from Verdun to Toul, and especially to reduce the former great fortress.

WOULD SIMPLIFY PROBLEM.

This would not be a solution of the main German problem or anything like it but it would very much simplify the problem.

The fall of Verdun, or of some smaller forts south of it, might compel the allies to resume a great retreat.

The recent presence of the Kaiser at Metz, and near Nancy, gives color to the view that the Germans may be hoping to batter their way through the huge artificial bulwarks of the French frontier along the middle Meuse. Then the Germans would be able to concentrate freely six, at least, of their seven armies, instead of five, as now, for the further invasion of France. The biggest battle, indefinitely prolonged, would still have to be fought out more or less on the present lines.

Another view is that the Germans are accumulating strength and working out plans for a more tremendous attempt on the French centre at Sezanne and Vitry, in the hope of breaking the allies' front, and cutting off at least a considerable portion of their forces.

NEW PLAN REQUIRED.

A third view, and I am inclined to share it, is that at the end of the sixth week of war the whole German position West and East is of character too unexpected, too disappointing and too serious to be dealt with hastily.

An entire change in the military situation has only become clear to the German general staff within the last two days.

Neither Joffre, it seems, nor his lieutenants, Foch, Dubail, Galliéni and Sir John French, are men to be held cheaply. It is by no means easy to plan a heroic stroke.

Just as the fall of Namur fortress forced a complete change in the Anglo-French plan of defence two weeks ago, and started an unfortunate retreat, so now there is reason to believe the failure of the Germans to turn the allies' left flank, or break through their centre before Paris has compelled a complete change in the Germans' offensive program.

In a very few hours the new plan must be disclosed. One day lost in executing any plan by the Germans is an inestimable loss.

AMERICAN DOLLARS FOR American Pay Envelopes

Map showing the changes in the great battle line in the last week. The German front, especially where confronted by the British, has been forced back over the Marne River and has been compelled to take up defensive tactics.

ALLIES DRIVE FOE; TAKE MEN AND GUNS

The German forces at Nancy have been driven back ten miles, French dispatches claim.

FRENCH RETAKE MUELHAUSEN.

The French are reported to have again re-occupied Muelhausen in Alsace and to have won an important engagement in the forest of Champeigne.

Encouraging reports to the government now lead to the belief that all danger of the allied army being surrounded has passed. The French and British have taken the offensive at many points along the line and at others the Germans are unsuccessful in their efforts to break down the allies' front, it is said.

The Germans are short of ammunition. German prisoners say the soldiers of the invading army are ordered to strip all their dead comrades of cartridges.

M. Briand, minister of justice in the French Cabinet, and M. Sembat, the Minister of Public Works, have returned to Paris from Bordeaux, the temporary seat of government. Their presence in the capital is giving the populace much encouragement.

Details of the fighting during the past five days along the line from Nanteuil-le-Haudouin to the German frontier show that the allies won only after the most vigorous and determined fighting. Both sides have suffered the most tragic losses in the fighting which centred around Meaux, La Ferte-Sous-Jouarre, Sezanne, Chateau Thierry and Vitry-le-Francois.

The French and English have been successful all along their left flank. They have not only rolled the German wing back nearly fifty miles—but are now able to carry operations on to a battlefield of their own choosing.

On Wednesday the German right took the offensive, pushing strongly against the army of Paris, which had taken up a position along the Ourcq. With savage fury the German legions assaulted repeatedly the French line. Artillery flamed and steel barbed lines shoved against the French and English ranks, but without avail. The Germans retired, but they refused to admit themselves beaten.

All night the soldiers rested on their arms and at daybreak on Thursday German artillery was again in action and shells were being hurled into the the French and English lines. German reinforcements had arrived during the night. For hours the bombardment was kept up. When the cannonade died away the German cavalry, supported by infantry moved forward. The French were entrenched and against the defensive works the German's charged time and again.

Rapid-fire guns and steady volleys of infantry cut gigantic swathes in the advancing ranks. The thinning lines fell back with the soldiers stumbling over the bodies of the dead. Above the din of the firing the notes of dozens of German bugles could be faintly heard, rallying the men to another charge. The gray ranks swept forward again, but they could not dislodge the French.

Late in the afternoon the Germans fell back rapidly. French officers report that the retreat was a rout, and that in their flight some of the Germans threw away their arms.

The French artillery shelled the disordered ranks of the enemy, while the British cavalry rode forward at a gallop, cutting down the rear guard.

The British cavalry is given much of the credit for pushing the Germans back twenty-five miles in one day. The British troopers were invincible.

Over the tablelands north of Sezanne the battle raged for three days. The French and ritish were acting in co-operation there and the Germans were riven back fourteen miles at the point of the bayonet. During this brilliant operation the allies received valiant support from the French, who crossed the Marne River at three separate points and protected the British rear, while the English artillery had full play against the retreating Germans.

FRESH GERMAN TROOPS LEAVE BERLIN DAILY

WOUNDED BROUGHT IN ONLY DURING DARKNESS

By CAPTAIN G. FORTESCUE,
Former Military Aide of Ex-President Roosevelt.

BERLIN, Sept. 6. (Delayed by censor)—There has been one great change in the face of this great German city. Every English and French name has disappeared.

SCAN LISTS OF WOUNDED.

Westminster Hotel is now the Station Hotel, and the Piccadilly Cafe has become the Vaterland. This has been the case throughout Germany. A recent number of the Hotel Keepers' Guide gives a list of the changes.

We see clocks in jewelers' shop windows, which formerly registered the hour in each capital of the world, with paper carefully pasted over the names of London, Paris, St. Petersburg and Brussels.

On a sea map in a window of the North German Lloyd office not one solitaire vessel floats on the seascape. In the days before the war these diagrams showed the daily location of vessels.

In the confusion that has engulfed world commerce many trade secrets are being revealed. Sheffield steel has for years been manufactured and exported from Germany, and all the famous makes of English gloves are put together in Bavaria.

I have read of the money stringency, but there is none here. Gold is not plentiful, but there is no difficulty in getting letters of credit cashed. As for myself, money cabled me has come through promptly.

NEW LISTS DAILY.

One gets a glimpse of the other side of the picture at the Red Cross Hospital. All day long a stream of sagger-eyed persons search lists of the wounded posted on the red brick walls.

Each day a new list is posted. Never does the list contain more than 1,500 names on any day. The lists give only the most meagre details.

Wounded soldiers brought to Berlin arrive only at night, and thus the gruesome sights of the terrible conflict is kept from the people at all costs. Not that they shrink from the payment of the toll that is being taken; they all know battles cannot be won without killing.

General staff communications are meagre of details. The reports are cold and bald. This holds good especially with the operations in the East.

What is going on in the West no one not in the secrets of the general staff can hope to check up.

RAISE NEW TROOPS.

Without question the troops are being moved from the French theatre of war to the Russian frontier. Mobilization has not actually ceased, and troops, at least the raw material, are being assembled in every city, town and village of the empire. They are taken to some garrison centre and immediately equipped and drilled.

Sidelights on the War

The Christian Herald says editorially:

"From the Christian era till the present time, as statists and historians tell us, there have been less than 240 warless years. Up to the middle of the nineteenth century, it was roughly computed that nearly 7,000,000,000 men had died in battle since the beginning of recorded history, a number equal to almost five times the present estimated population of the globe."

"GERMANS WEARING OUT."

BORDEAUX, Sept. 11.—The military correspondent of the Temps considers the situation from the standpoint of the Allies more than reassuring. The German offensive has not only been stopped, he says, but they are being driven back and their troops are wearing out.

SEEK BLANKETS HERE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Representatives in New York of the British War Office have made overtures for the purchase from American manufacturers of 1,500,000 army blankets and 1,500,000 uniforms.

ENGLISH GATES UP SOON.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—After Sept. 14 English officials will not admit American citizens not provided with passports. This applies to Americans coming to England from the United States as well as from the Continent.

LOAD BEEF FOR ENGLAND.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Some 2,500 tons of beef are being loaded on the British steamship Highland Watch, intended, it is said, for British troops in Europe. She sails Sunday.

WATCH CANADIAN LINE.

CALAIS, Me., Sept. 11.—The Canadian customs officials just across the international bridge over the St. Croix River, have received orders to examine every vehicle coming from the United States.

NURSE IS BEATEN.

AMSTERDAM, via London, Sept. 11.—The Vorwaerts gives Herr Traub, member of the Reichstag, as authority for the statement that a male nurse who wrote the will of a dying French count was subjected to corporal punishment.

SHOW GERMAN FLAG.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—A Reuter dispatch from Paris says a German regimental flag arrived at the Northern railroad station, and was displayed before an enthusiastic crowd prior to being taken to the Invalides Museum.

CENSOR SHIP NEWS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Word from Montreal is that the Canadian customs authorities there decided to allow arrivals or departures of steamers to be given out for publication.

Kaiser's Youngest Son Is Wounded

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 11.—An official statement issued in Berlin says that Prince Joachim of Prussia, who is the Kaiser's youngest son, has been wounded in the thigh by shrapnel. There is no mention made of the place at which the Prince was fighting when he was shot.

Say Germans Killed 103-Year-Old Woman

LONDON, Sept. 11.—A dispatch to the Daily Telegraph from Moscow states that in a Polish village, the Germans killed a Jewish woman, aged 103. The Germans carried out a program in the Jewish quarter of Opothina, in the government of Radom.

Rothschilds Refuse Austria's Offer

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The banking house of Rothschilds today declined to accept the offer of the Austrian government to remit money for the payment of the coupons of the Hungarian loan of 1914 on the ground that such a transaction would involve it in a deal with one of England's enemies.

Italy's Foreign Minister Resigns

ROME, Sept. 11.—An Athens dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company states that Foreign Minister Panas has resigned, but that his resignation has not yet been acted upon.

HOW A MODERN ARMY LEADER DOES HIS WORK

It is related that during one of the great battles of the Russo-Japanese war, a correspondent found a grave little Jap wearing a general's shoulder straps, gravely fishing for minnows in a tumbling Manchurian stream. Over the hills cannon were booming, and along a fifty-mile front, battle raged. The correspondent asked:

"General—aren't you interested in the battle?" The question was natural for the Jap was commander-in-chief at that point. But the general replied:

"Sir, this battle was fought and won in Tokio a year ago."

That is an illustration of how a modern general works. Another is the famous remark of the great von Moltke, when the Franco-Prussian war was declared in 1870. He handed over a bunch of maps and orders, heaved a great sigh and remarked:

"There, my work is finished."

And the war was fought out on the lines he had laid down—and won.

A modern general-in-chief does not concern himself with cavalry charges and artillery practice and the loss of thousands of men. The force behind the German army, for instance—the General Staff—is not interested in a skirmish here, and a spectacular charge there. The General Staff is only interested in the relative position of the great armies in the field, and in the advance or retreat of those armies.

TASK OF STAFF GREAT.

In the present war, the task of the German General Staff is greater than that of any of the other commanders. For Germany has two campaigns on hand—one against Russia, the other against the allies. Whole army corps—40,000 men and more—are shifted back and forth, clear across the German empire as the tide of battle swings back and forth. In two to three days, hundreds of thousands of men can be transferred from one fighting front to the other.

The general staff may have headquarters in Berlin, or in some city nearer the French frontier. By telegraph and telephone, every movement of troops is instantly reported. These reports, however, are not in great detail. For instance, General von Kluk reports:

"Cavalry located a body of British threatening our right flank. They were dislodged by artillery fire, and our lines were extended to cover them." Or he may report: "We found the allies in force across the Marne River, and drove them back seven miles to new positions in the hills."

The general staff, with reports of this nature constantly coming in, plans the details of the move. For instance, an order may go to General von Kluk: "Make no attempt to advance for three days, but harass the enemy." Or the order may be: "Fall back to favorable positions ten or fifteen miles in our rear."

Last week, when von Kluk's army was nearing Paris, the general staff undoubtedly ordered him to: "Abandon forward movement. Strike eastward, driving allies east and north, and endeavor to prevent their junction with the Paris garrison."

It was after this movement that a heavy force struck von Kluk's army and forced the retirement reported during the last few days. At the same time, two new factors arose—the Russian successes against Austria, and the threatened Russian attack through Belgium. The general staff then apparently ordered: "Two army corps from von Kluk's command will entrain for transportation to the Russian frontier. Two other corps will fall back on Brussels to meet a flank attack. The advance will be temporarily abandoned."

SEES WHOLE BATTLE LINE.

Thus the General Staff sees the battles as an affair 200 miles long. General von Kluk, on the other hand, has command over a force covering perhaps fifty miles front; and his only concern is with that force. When the General Staff orders an advance, suppose the river Marne lies just before him. He then orders his engineering corps to prepare pontoon bridges; and when all is ready, artillery fire clears the way. Then comes the advance—the cavalry feeling out the enemy—aeroplanes overhead—infantry pouring across the pontoons, artillery battering away at the enemy's guns. Perhaps the attempt to advance is beaten back. Be sure von Kluk will force his troops to the utmost to carry out the orders of the General Staff. But if he fails—then he reports failure and receives new orders. If he succeeds—he fortifies himself in the new position.

Under von Kluk, moreover, are other generals. There may be three to five corps in his command, 40,000 men in a corps. Each corps comprises cavalry, artillery and infantry. The units in these branches run as small as eight men. Under von Kluk's orders, the brigadier general commanding an infantry brigade may be ordered to attack a certain hill held by the enemy. He has perhaps three regiments under his command—each commanded in turn by a lieutenant colonel. He sends one regiment to the right of the hill, one to the left, one straight at it, and they act together. Each regiment may comprise four battalions—each battalion including four companies—each company including three platoons—each platoon including four to five sections, and each section including two squads. A squad is eight men under a corporal. And the taking of that hill means commands passed clear down the line—from one officer to the officer just beneath him, till the men in action are led by lieutenants, captains, or perhaps majors, and receive their orders by word of mouth or by the bugle.

It is like the House that Jack Built—the command passed from man to man. And it welds the army into an effective unit to obey the will of the general in command.

"Take Paris or Die" Kaiser's Watchword

German Coat of Arms.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—"We must take France or die; the German army must fight to the very last man," declared H. Von Eckhardt, the new German minister to Mexico, just here from Berlin, where he held a war talk with Emperor William.

"The Kaiser has not altered his plans to take Paris," said Von Eckhardt.

"We must take Paris and subjugate the French army. Not that we will take France to keep it, but to destroy forever the menace of French militarism and the power of the French army.

"I do not know how long it will take, whether it will be a week or six weeks, but you may rest assured that we will take Paris. If we do not it will be because there are no more Germans left to fight."

"Within twenty-four hours Boston can be battling a fire that would make the Salem conflagration look insignificant, because the lessons to be learned by the Salem catastrophe have not been digested by the people and fire fighting forces of the city," declared Frank A. McInnes, head of the Boston water department, at the convention of the New England Waterworks Association, at the Copley Plaza.

Today short papers were discussed by the gathering in the hotel lecture room.

PATENT LAW CHANGE URGED TO HELP TRADE

Edward F. McSweeney, chairman of the Board of Port Directors, in discussing the necessity for American business men taking advantage of the disturbed conditions in Europe, said today:

"The one great stumbling block in our way at present that should be immediately remedied is the fact that for years our patent laws have placed American manufacturers under the most serious handicaps in regard to the production of goods and materials in which chemicals are used extensively, or in the chemical industries themselves, both of which are greatly hampered by the laws of this country of ours, which grants patents to aliens on articles manufactured elsewhere than in this country.

"In this way, Germany especially, has secured an enormous lead over the rest of the world in the chemical industry, so that the other countries of the globe are dependent upon her almost exclusively for their chemicals and coal tar products.

"About ten years ago England passed a law that patents would not be valid in the United Kingdom unless the goods thus patented were also manufactured in that country, and this act of the English government is held to be largely responsible for the betterment of English manufacturing conditions today, in spite of a great many serious handicaps that had to be met during the last ten years.

TALK OF PLANS HERE.

"It is a live question today, whether such a patent law as that passed by England would not be of immense advantage to the United States, particularly at this critical time, both in the encouragement of business and industry by increasing the opportunities for the employment of labor, and in the stimulation it would give our own inventors and chemists—and thus make the industries of the United States independent and not have to rely exclusively any more upon foreign countries for our dyestuffs, our chemicals and other coal-tar products.

"This matter of changing the patent law of the United States should be one of the first things Congress should consider in connection with the present situation."

Charles G. Bancroft, president of the International Trust Company and chairman of the dyes and dyestuffs committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, is also convinced that there should be immediate legislation in the matter of changing our patent laws to make them conform with the European laws.

"The quicker Congress acts in this matter the better," said Mr. Bancroft today. "I am in favor of anything that will be of benefit to American commerce and industry, of course, and I believe that a patent law which compelled the patentee to manufacture in America under his patents will be of immense benefit to American industry. This will be especially true under the present conditions in Europe and there should be no delay."

FAVORS A CHANGE.

Samuel Cabot, manufacturing chemist, of Samuel Cabot, Incorporated, also favors a quick change in the patent laws. Mr. Cabot said:

"I am in favor of a patent law that exacts from the patentee an obligation to manufacture his products under that patent. Our company depends more on its manufacturing processes than upon its patents for its success. My opinion in the matter is a disinterested one."

JAMES GORDON BENNETT AT 73 WEDS BARONESS

PARIS, Sept. 11.—Baroness George de Reuter, who was Miss Maud Potter, daughter of John Potter, of an old Philadelphia family, and James Gordon Bennett, proprietor of the New York Herald, were married by both civil and religious ceremony yesterday.

The civil ceremony was performed by the Mayor in the City Hall of the sixteenth arrondissement of Paris. The bride looked extremely well; the bridegroom seemed very happy. The religious marriage was solemnized at the American Protestant Episcopal Church, the Rev. Dr. Ramsay N. Watson, the pastor, officiating. Dr. Watson baptized Mr. Bennett yesterday. It is stated.

The witnesses for the baroness were Vicomte de Breuteuil, who married Mrs. Arthur Padelford, formerly Miss Edythe Grant of New York, and Duke de Camastro of Italy. The bridegroom's witnesses were the American Ambassador, Myron T. Herrick, and Dr. Albert Robert.

The bride wore a street costume. Mr. Bennett, Ambassador Herrick and the Duke de Camastra wore morning clothes, while Dr. Robert and Vicomte de Breteuil were frock coats and silk hats.

Mr. Bennett, a bachelor, had long been attentive to the baroness, a charming woman and a leader in Paris society. She was of the party which Mr. Bennett invited on a trip on his yacht Lysistrata in the Mediterranean last Spring.

On the voyage, too, were Lieutenant-General Sir John Grenfell Maxwell and Lady Maxwell, who was Louise Bonyngy of California; Duke and Duchess Lanza di Camastra and Marquis de Bugliana.

Mr. Bennett was taken ill suddenly and landed at Cairo; to him were summoned the best physicians of Paris. He is seventy-three years old, but such is his power of recuperation that he recovered sufficiently to be carried on his yacht to his beautiful estate at Beaulieu on the Mediterranean.

Mr. Bennett's bride is the widow of Baron George de Reuter, brother of Baron Herbert de Reuter, managing director of Reuter's Telegram Company of London.

Their father received his title in 1871 from the Duke of Saxe-Coburg for his enterprise in gathering news.

MRS. JAMES GORDON BENNETT, Baroness de Reuter, the former Miss Maud Potter of Philadelphia, who was married to the New York Herald proprietor in Paris yesterday.

TURKISH ENVOY A. RUSTEM BEY OFFENDS U. S.

The Turkish envoy has been criticizing American methods and American policies with a freedom in the past few weeks, which has caused alarm and amusement at the White House. His statement yesterday as the worst possible diplomacy at this time.

How She Acquired "Feminine Charm"

A nicely dressed woman sat beside me in the train. Everyone stared at her. It was not her beauty of feature that held our eyes, nor her costume. But there was something about her face and expression—I risked it and asked: "Would you mind telling me how you keep your complexion so dazzlingly pure? Don't think me impertinent, but you seem over 50, yet haven't a line in your face, and your cheeks are quite peach-like. How do you do it?"

Laughing, she said: "That's easy; I remove my skin. Sounds shocking, doesn't it? But listen. Instead of cosmetics I use only pure, unrefined wax, procurable at any druggist's. I apply this nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings. This gently absorbs the soiled, weather-beaten film-skin, without pain or discomfort, thus revealing the fresh, clear under-skin. Every woman has a beautiful complexion underneath, you know. Then, to ward off wrinkles I use a face bath made by dissolving powdered saxolite (one ounce) in one-half pint witch hazel—a harmless astringent which 'tones' the skin wonderfully. Very simple, isn't it? I thought so. I'm now trying her plan, and like it immensely."—Milicent Brown in The Story Teller.—ADVERTISEMENT.

MIGHTY PEACE SENTIMENT WAVE TO ROLL FROM BOSTON

PEOPLE OF ALL WALKS JOIN MOVE

With the practical completion today of plans for the tremendous peace meeting to be held on Boston Common Sunday, the most impressive demonstration Boston has ever seen was assured.

Eighty-five thousand labor men have been summoned to attend in a body by the Boston Central Labor Union's executive committee. The committee itself will attend and sit upon the platform.

Clergymen throughout the city will at the Sunday morning service call the attention of their congregations to the meeting and urge them to attend.

From hundreds of letters coming to the AMERICAN'S office and the telephone inquiries, it is evident that all Boston is planning to come. One hundred thousand men and women can get within hearing of the Parkman Band Stand on the Common. The speakers will be in the band stand, and it is expected the throng about the Stand will number close to a hundred thousand—perhaps more.

CHIEF TO PRESIDE.

Mayor James M. Curley will preside at the meeting and the list of speakers contains the names of Governor Walsh, Rabbi M. M. Eichler, Mrs. Maud Wood Park, Bishop John W. Hamilton, Albert G. Bryant of the World Peace Foundation, Superintendent of Schools Franklin B. Dyer, Ignatius McNulty, president of the Building Trades Council, and William Keis, president of the Boston Central Labor Union.

In addition to the speeches there will be music. Local No. 9, Boston Music Protective Association, with the public spirit, voted to volunteer the services of the members to make up a first-class band. Theron D. Perkins, W. S. Hudson and C. O. Kopkins are choosing the members of this band and arranging a musical program.

In addition to the band selections, there will be singing by high class artists. Maria Hampai, soprano, has promised to sing, as have Ernestine Gauthier, contralto; Giovanni Zerga, tenor, and Edgar Littleton, basso—all well-known opera stars.

ALL PEACE SONGS.

The band selections and the songs and hymns will be peace songs in every case. In several of the hymns, the mighty throng about the band stand will join.

Nothing of a controversial nature will be said at the meeting. It is called, not to denounce the war and the causes of the war, but to discuss how best the war may be ended. The meeting is planned as a demonstration of Boston's high belief that the war should cease.

This meeting and other similar meetings called in various cities throughout the country are the result of an invitation sent out by the Boston AMERICAN and Mr. Hearst's other papers to leaders in all walks of life, urging a great unified peace movement. These peace meetings are the first step in that movement.

THE AMERICAN GETS MANY LETTERS IN FAVOR OF PEACE

Many letters come to the AMERICAN from people of Boston and New England who are supporting the peace movement. They indicate the growth of an immense public sentiment which demands that the war cease.

A labor man writes:

"I am glad to see what you are doing to advocate the stopping of this awful carnage. It would seem that the United States should take the first step toward ending this war by preventing the shipment of gold and food supplies to these warring nations."

This letter is on a letter head of the "International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers."

Isaac M. Francis of Saylesville, R. I., writes to enlist in the World Peace Committee, and praises Mr. Hearst's activity for peace.

Joseph P. Stone of No. 959 Eddy street, Providence, writes:

"This war is a lesson to us—a lesson that teaches us the need of fighting for America and Americans. Let us have peace first, and then a great 'Get Together' movement."

Miss Louie R. Stanwood, prominent in suffrage ranks, writes:

"As president of the Writers' League for Equal Suffrage, and president of the Manchester Equal Suffrage League, a member of the Ways and Means Committee of Massachusetts, and the Equal Franchise Commission of Boston—as a writer of plays and other things (whose writings have sometimes appeared in the AMERICAN), and a suffrage speaker, etc., I am glad to sign myself a member of the Peace Movement.

"I beg to call attention to the facts that suffragists in general believe in peace, and work for it, and that the peace parade in New York city was led by suffragists. I also want to ask what there is, at present, that we women can do for Peace. We can certainly do much more when we have the vote, but meanwhile, I wish to join the movement and do what I can.

"With good wishes to the AMERICAN. "LOUIE R. STANWOOD."

Peace Committee Is Formed in New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—An international peace committee was organized at a meeting here of more than 100 men and women. The purpose of the organization is to urge acceptance of mediation upon the warring nations of Europe.

POPE ASKS PRAYERS FOR PEACE

ROME, Sept. 11.—The Osservatore Romano, the official organ of the Vatican, publishes a pastoral letter from Pope Benedict XV. in an encyclical to the episcopacy of the world.

It contains the program for the pontificate of Pope Benedict, which, summarized, calls for renewed efforts to spread religion throughout the world and urges peace and brotherhood among peoples and nations in the fear of God.

The encyclical addressed to the universal Catholic world deals chiefly with the European war. "Looking out upon the flock intrusted to our care," Pope Benedict says, "the immense spectacle of a general war has struck us with unutterable horror and sadness.

"When we see such a considerable portion of Europe devastated by fire and sword and drenched with the blood of Christians, it is incumbent upon us to embrace all without distinction, lambs and sheep, in the arms of paternal charity."

The Pope implores intercession for peace to the Virgin, whose nativity has just been celebrated, and then continues: "We exhort most earnestly those who govern the destiny of the nations, that they should bring themselves to a frame of mind whereby they may put aside all dissensions contrary to the welfare of humanity.

"Let them realize that there already is too much suffering and sorrow attached to this mortal life, and that it should not be rendered more wretched or more sorrowful. Let them realize how much ruin and disaster already has been wrought, and how much human blood already has been shed."

Addressing the heads of the nations, the Pope says: "Hasten, therefore, to enter into a council of peace. Grasp the right hand of friendship and receive a special reward from God for yourselves and your nations, and earn the greatest praise from the brotherhood of man."

The encyclical ends by the Pope expressing the hope that the beginning of his pontificate will see the end of wars.

Gibbons, "Heart and Soul for Peace"

NAPLES, Sept. 11.—Cardinal Gibbons expressed his fervent hope for peace in an interview with the AMERICAN correspondent just before sailing for America. He said:

"Before leaving Rome I received a message from the Washington Peace Society to interest the Pontiff in the peace movement. The Pope has always prayed for peace. The raging conflagration terribly saddens His Holiness. The Vatican's secretary of state will do all in his power to hasten peace. I am heart and soul for peace and gladly give my support to the peace movement."

Cardinal O'Connell Prays for Peace Effort by U. S.

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.

NAPLES, Sept. 11.—Hopes that peace would soon be restored were expressed by Cardinals Gibbons and O'Connell before they sailed last night on the liner Canopic.

"No living soul can refuse to support the movement tending to obtain speedy peace," said Cardinal O'Connell. "The horrors of this war are too flagrant; the suffering widespread. May God grant the wish of the noble American nation and its efforts to restore harmony among the nations."

Officers of Fraternities, 7,460,000 Strong, Urge Peace

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—National official heads of six great fraternal organizations, including the American Federation of Catholic Societies, have pledged the support of themselves and the millions of American citizens they represent to the world peace movement which is being organized in every section of the United States by W. R. Hearst's newspapers.

The organizations represent a combined membership of approximately 7,460,000, apportioned as follows:

Independent order of Odd Fellows, 2,500,000; Knights of Pythias, 750,000; Order of Elks, 406,000; American Federation of Catholic Societies, 2,000,000; Improved Order of Red Men, 435,000; Ancient Order of United Workmen, 306,000.

In addition to these, the New York State grand master of the Ancient Order of Free and Accepted Masons enrolled as a member of the world peace committee, declaring it "gave him the highest pleasure to take part in such a movement."

Many State officials of the national organizations represented, as well as the officers of other large fraternal organizations in New York and other States, have sent pledges of their loyal support for the peace movement.

Peace Centenary to Be Called Off

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11. The celebration planned for next Spring, in commemoration of the 100 years of peace between the United States and Great Britain, probably will be abandoned. England intimated that it would be rather embarrassing for her to participate while she was engaged in a great war herself.

Weak Lungs Often Lead to Serious Illness

If you have weak lungs, you are generally subject to colds or throat trouble and easily susceptible to serious lung Trouble. In many cases pneumonia or bronchial troubles leave the Lungs in a much weakened condition. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine for the throat and lungs which has been found to be beneficial, even when a change of climate and other treatments failed to bring relief. Read this case:

At last I began to raise enormous quantities (both bowl and pail) of matter. A California homebuilder, to this time, advised to use Eckman's Alterative. I did so at once and commenced taking it the last week in October. I began to improve, and the first week in January, 1902, I resumed my regular occupations, having gained in every way comfortable flesh. It is now ten years since my recovery has been effected, and I cheerfully praise Eckman's Alterative. Yours truly, W. M. TATEM.

WIFE OF CARMAN IN CELL

MINEOLA, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Mrs. Florence Carman, wife of Dr. Edward Carman, of Freeport, is today confined in a cell at the Nassau County Jail, following the return of an indictment charging her with first degree murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey in Dr. Carman's office.

The discovery of a 38-calibre revolver hidden under the floor of the barn behind the Carman home was responsible for the indictment, it was learned today. Detectives had sought the weapon for several weeks. It was identified as one seen in the Carman home before the shooting.

Supreme Court Justice Kelley declares he will not set a precedent by admitting Mrs. Carman to bail. District Attorney Smith is making plans to ask the Appellate Division of the court for a special term to try Mrs. Carman. If the court grants the special session Mrs. Carman will be tried in a couple of months.

The charge of first degree murder supersedes the one of manslaughter brought a few weeks after Mrs. Bailey was shot to death in the physician's office on June 26. The new indictment was based on the testimony of witnesses produced since the jury first considered the case.

REMANDED TO JAIL.

District Attorney Louis J. Smith says that four other new witnesses, who have not testified at all before the jury, will appear at the trial with stories corroborating the persons whom the jury questioned.

Mrs. Carman, who had been at liberty under $15,000 bail, was brought to Mineola from Freeport by her counsel in anticipation that such an indictment would be returned. She was arraigned immediately and committed to jail.

The indictment of Mrs. Carman created a sensation almost as profound as the murder itself. Early in the evening of June 26, while Dr. Carman was attending Mrs. Bailey in his office on the ground floor of the Carman residence, an armed hand, declared by the prosecutor to be a woman's, was thrust through the window. The crash of glass as the revolver broke the pane was followed almost at once by the sound of a shot.

HAS FAITH IN WIFE.

Persons entering the room found Mrs. Bailey dead, a bullet in her heart. Dr. Carman was in the room and told the story of the shooting. Mrs. Carman was up stairs, she stated afterward, and had been for some time. Witnesses at the coroner's inquest told of having seen a woman on the lawn near the physician's office just before the sound of the shot. Dr. Carman has steadfastly expressed his faith in his wife's innocence.

Testimony at the coroner's inquest in July brought out that Mrs. Carman had installed a telephonic device between her own room and the physician's office, so that she might overhear the conversations between her husband and his patients. It also was developed that Mrs. Carman once entered her husband's office and slapped the face of a nurse who was there with him.

STRIKING PARENTS FACE FINE

BROCKTON, Sept. 11.—Some of Brockton's best known citizens are liable to arrest and a fine of $50 as a result of the remarkable strike at the Hancock School.

City officials today declared they might ask convictions on a charge of inducing the children to stay away from school. This move would be directed particularly against twenty-five of the parents who attended the indignation meeting against Miss Clara J. Wetherell, principal of the Hancock School.

Another possibility is the arrest of those who toured the school district in autos to induce the parents not to send their children to the opening session this year. The trouble is the outgrowth of friction that developed in June.

Truant Officer Charles P. Brooks said:

"I do not see why I should not move in this matter as in others where the law is violated."

The parents declare they will stand firm by their vote at the indignation meeting, which was:

Resolved: That we keep our children from attending said school until we are given a fair and open hearing and some satisfactory action is taken.

The normal attendance at the school is 159, and it is reported today that half the pupils are staying at home on their parents' orders.

The school board has notified the committee of parents that on Tuesday evening they will hear the charges preferred against Miss Clara J. Wetherell.

Superintendent of Schools George L. Farley emphasizes the State law governing the attendance of children and the responsibility of parents.

George A. Morse is secretary of the parents' committee and R. H. Skillings is chairman. They have sent copies of their protests to Mayor Howard, ex-officio chairman of the school board, to each member of the board and to Superintendent Farley.

Miss Wetherell denies the truth of all the charges. She has been teaching thirteen years in the Brockton schools, three years in the Hancock School, where she has the ninth grade, and the rest of the time in various Brockton schools.

The parents and children make these charges against Miss Wetherell:

That she uses slang, constantly telling the children to "cut it out" and to mind their own business.

That she makes fun of the clothing of the children.

That she makes fun of the children's names.

That she makes fun of the occupations of the children's parents.

GIANT AIRSHIP AMERICA MAY BE USED IN WAR

HAMMONDSPORT, N. Y., Sept. 11.—It is accepted here as a fact that the air craft America, built at the order of Rodman Wanamaker to commemorate the centenary of Anglo-American peace by a flight across the Atlantic, is destined to become an important adjunct of the British navy for use in the European war. It has become common talk here within the last few days that a millionaire sportsman of New York had negotiated the purchase for $50,000.

From inside the giant flyer is expected to pass to another individual who will be a citizen of Canada. The sole purchase of the imaginative need be only a short one.

At the Curtiss Aeroplane Company's plant, the greatest secrecy has been maintained during the last few weeks. Extra men are said to have been employed on final orders for machines and motors.

Nothing has been given out as to the progress on the construction of the America, which was agreed upon when the Hammondsport flight was postponed in July until October 1. About the village it is well known that the machine is being rushed into shape for shipment and that four duplicates of that giant machine are being constructed.

Czarevitch Enters Into Public Life

PETROGRAD, Sept. 11.—The Czar has announced his intention of allowing the young Czarevitch to take a more active interest in public affairs. The Czar feels keenly the delightful stories that are broadcast throughout the whole world concerning his heir and he proposes to frame them the most effective denial possible.

MOTOR NOTES

By J. C. KERRISON.

George H. Lawrence, of the local Kissel Kar Company, returned yesterday from a few days' motor trip through the White Mountains. He was in Bethlehem the night of the frost and says that on Tuesday morning it really looked as though Winter had arrived. The roads as well as the forests and the mountain peak were covered with thick frost and overcoats and sweaters were in great demand. During his trip Mr. Lawrence covered something like 1,200 miles in the Kissel without once making an adjustment.

Manager P. S. Aultman, of the Kelly-Springfield Motor Truck Company, who yesterday delivered one of the big trucks to the local branch of the Standard Oil Company, is authority for the statement that since the opening of the European war there is not a truck factory of any consequence in this country but what has received tentative orders for trucks for use in the service of some one of the belligerent nations.

"The only preventative," says Mr. Aultman, "to the fulfilment of these orders is the fact that to furnish them to any of the contending armies would be a violation of the neutrality law and there would be great danger of their being seized in transportation. The war, however, has done more and will do more than can any one other thing to demonstrate beyond question the great practicability and efficiency of motor trucks. It is motor vehicles which has added materially to the mobility of the German army and has added to the efficiency of all the armies in the field.

Jack Cooper, of Endurance inner-tube fame, is visiting Manager Hamilton of the local branch, and together the two are forwarding old acquaintances in the local trade as well as preparing for an active and aggressive season.

H. A. Gilmore, of the E. A. Gilmore Company, is decidedly busy these days getting his new salesrooms on Massachusetts avenue ready for the display of the Lewis Six, which will be placed on view and sale at No. 92 Massachusetts avenue, commencing Monday morning. Mr. Gilmore has already received assurances that justify him in the belief that the Lewis car will receive a warm reception at the hands of the New England motorists.

THE LAST SHOT

By FREDERICK PALMER

A Story of War and Love, Told by a World-Famed War Correspondent. The Author Is Now at the Front.

Copyright, 1914, by Chas. Scribner's Sons. Copyright, 1914, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

READ THIS SYNOPSIS FIRST.

Marta Galland and her mother live on the border between the country of the Browns, in their own, and the country of the Grays. By their house is the road from the pass in the range. To hold the pass was to hold the ranges.

Their house was built by the first diplomat on the land that his king had given him for one of the most brilliant feats of arms in the history of the pass. Beyond the house rises the ruins of a castle centuries old, the lower still there.

Colonel Westerling, commander of the regimental post of the Grays on the other side of the white pass is marking the border, taking tea with the Gallands, tells them that he has been assigned to the general staff at the capital. Marta predicts that some day he will be chief of staff, head of the Gray army.

Marta utters a cry. An aeroplane is sighted. Seeking to avoid the old tower, the aviator and his machine crashed to the ground. He rises from the wreckage as Marta runs to him, his left hand hanging limp, mashed and bleeding.

"It must be bandaged; I have a handkerchief," she begged.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Only bruised—and it's the left—and glad it was not his right arm," Westerling arrived and joined Marta in offers of assistance just as they heard the preliminary honk of an automobile sounding the right of way at top speed in the direction of the pass.

"Thank you, but they're coming for me," said Lanstron to Westerling as he glanced up the road.

Westerling was looking at the wreck. Lanstron, to recognized him as an officer, though in mufti, kicked a bit of the torn cloth over the aeroplane to hide it. At this Westerling smiled faintly. Then Lanstron saluted as officer to officer in the slight salute across the white posts, giving his name and receiving in return Westerling's.

They made a contrast, these two men, the colonel of the Grays, swart and sturdy, his physical virility evident, and the captain of the Browns, some seven or eight years the junior, bareheaded, in dishevelled fatigue uniform, his lips twitching, his slender body quivering with the pain that he could not control, while his rather bold forehead and delicate, sensitive features suggested a tension of nerve and nerves who might have left experiments in a laboratory for an adventure in the air. There was a kind of challenge in their glances; the challenge of an ancient feud of their peoples; of the professional rivalry of polite duellists. Lanstron's slight figure seemed to express the weaker number of the three million soldiers of the Browns. Westerling's bulkier one, the four million five hundred thousand of the Grays.

"You had a narrow squeak and you made a very snappy recovery at the last second," said Westerling, passing a compliment across the white posts.

"That's in the line of duty for you and me, isn't it?" Lanstron replied, his voice thick with pain as he forced a smile.

There was no pose in his fortitude. He was evidently disgusted with himself over the whole business, and he turned to the group of three officers and a civilian who alighted from a big Brown army automobile as if he were prepared to have them say their s orst. They seemed between the impulse of reprimanding and embracing him.

"I hope that you are not surprised at the result," said the oldest of the officers, a man of late middle age, either affectionately and jeeringly. He wore a single order on his breast, a plain iron cross, and the insignia of his rank was that of a field-marshal.

"Not now. I should be again, sir," said Lanstron, looking full at the field-marshal in the appeal of one asking for another chance. "I was we ll-gathering. But I shall not woolgai her next time. I've got a reminder and I'm sure that a string t s around my finger."

COURAGE CHEAPEST THING AN ARMY HAS, SAYS GRAY COLONEL

"Yes, that hand needs immediate attention," said the doctor. He and another officer began helping Lanstron into the automobile.

"The field-marshal was Partow, their chief of staff," Westerling explained.

"Yes," said Mrs. Galland. "I remember when he was a young infantry officer before the last war, before he had won the iron cross and become so great. He was not of an army family—a doctor's son, but very clever and skilful."

"Getting a little old for his work!" remarked Westerling. "But apparently he is keen enough to take a personal interest in anything new."

"Wasn't it thrilling and—and terrible!" Marta exclaimed.

"Yes, like war at our own door again," replied Mrs. Galland, who knew war. She had seen war raging on the pass road. Lanstron, the young man said his name was, was engrossed after a pause. "No doubt the Lanstrons of Thorbourg. An old family, and many of them in the army."

"The way he refused to give in—that was fine!" said Marta.

Westerling, who had been engrossed with his own thoughts, looked up.

"Courage is the cheapest thing an army has! You can get hundreds of young officers who are glad to take a risk of that kind. The thing is," and his fingers opened in on the palm of his hand in a pounding gesture of the forearm, "to direct and command—head work—organization!"

"If war should come again—" Marta began; Mrs. Galland nudged her. A Brown never mentioned war to an officer of the vanquished; it was not at all in the accepted properties. But Marta rushed on: "So many would be engaged that it would be more horrible than ever."

"You cannot make omelets without breaking eggs," Westerling answered with what a flatness.

"The actual fighting will take its place as an unimportant thing," he went on, his mind still running on the theme of her prophecy, which the meeting with Lanstron had quickened. "But war will, as ever, be won by the bayonet that takes and holds a position. We have had to run through Verdun now."

There he broke off. He did not accompany Mrs. Galland and Marta back to the house, but made his adieus at the garden gate.

"I'm sure that I shall never marry a soldier!" Marta burst out as she and her mother were ascending the steps.

CHAPTER II.

Ten Years Later

HIS EXCELLENCY the chief of staff of the Grays was seldom in his office. His Excellency had years, rank, prestige. The breast of his uniform sagged with the weight of his decorations. He appeared for the army at great functions; his picture was in the shop windows. Hellworth Westerling, the new vice-chief of staff, was content with this arrangement. His years would not permit him the supreme honor. He was for a figurehead, while he had the power.

His appointment to the staff ten years ago had given him the field he wanted, the capital itself, for the play of his abilities. His vital energy, his impressive personality, his gift for courting the influences that counted, whether man's or woman's, his active readiness in stooping to some measures that were in keeping with the times but not with army precedent, had won for him the goal of his ambition. He had passed over the heads of older men, whom many thought his betters, rather ruthlessly. Those who would serve him loyally he drew around him; those who would hinder he crowded out of his way.

In the adjoining room, occupied by his staff officers, the walls were hung with the silhouettes of infantrymen, such as one sees at manœuvres, in different positions of firing, crouching in shallow trenches or lying flat on the ground on level earth. Another silhouette, that of an infantryman running, was peppered with white points in arms and legs and parts of the body that were not vital, to show in how many places a man may be hit with a small-calibre bullet and still survive.

IF WESTERLING WERE TO WIN IT WOULD BE WITH FIVE MILLIONS

In this day of universal European conception, if Westerling were to win in war it would be with five millions—five hundred thousand more than when he faced a young Brown officer over the wreck of an aeroplane—including the reserves, each man running, firing, crouching, as was the figure on the wall, and trying to give more of the white points that peppered the silhouette than he received.

Now Turcas, the assistant vice-chief of staff, and Bouchard, chief of the division of intelligence, standing on either side of Westerling's desk, awaiting his decisions on certain matters which they had brought to his attention. Both were older than Westerling, Turcas by ten and Bouchard by fifteen years.

Turcas had been strongly urged in inner army circles for the place that Westerling had won, but his manner and his ability to court influence were against him. A lath of a man and stiff as a lath, pale, with thin, tight-ly-drawn lips, quiet, steel-gray eyes, a tracery of blue veins showing on his full temples, he suggested the ascetic no less than the soldier, while his incisive brevity of speech, flavored now and then with pungent humor, without any inflection in his dry voice, was in keeping with his appearance. He arrived with the clerks in the morning and frequently remained after they were gone. As a master of detail Westerling regarded him as an invaluable assistant, with certain limitations, which were those of the pigeonhole and the treadmill.

As for Bouchard, nature had meant him to be a wheel-horse. He had never had any hope of being chief of staff. Hawk-eyed, with a great beak nose and iron-gray hair, intensely and solemnly serious, lacking a sense of humor, he would have looked at home with his big, bony hands gripping a breadsword hilt and his lank body clothed in chain armor. He had a passion's devotion to its master for his chief.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

This great story will be continued in the AMERICAN every day. No more thrilling piece of fiction has been written in years. You cannot afford to miss a single word. Remember, every day in the AMERICAN.

MRS. MEYERS IS GIVEN DIVORCE FROM SHOE MAN

Mrs. Ilione Woodbury Meyers, wife of Hiram B. Meyers of No. 22 Blagden street, a former selectman in Wellesley, has been granted a divorce by Judge Dubuque in the Norfolk Superior Court.

Meyers, who is a wealthy shoe manufacturer was ordered by the court to pay $25 per week for the support of two minor children.

The Meyers were married at Boston, October 31, 1897, and after marriage lived in Boston and Wellesley.

Mrs. Meyers in 1912 was the defendant in a $25,000 alienation of affection suit, brought against her by Annie E. Lidstone of Brookline, wife of George W. Lidstone, who was at the time the chauffeur of the defendant's husband. The jury in the case disagreed.

This case was finally concluded by the entry of an agreement for neither party, which was received and filed in the Norfolk Superior Court October 24, 1912.

PIMPLES ON FACE ITCHED AND BURNED

Face Dry and Scaly. Distracted With Discomfort. Was a Sight. Couldn't Sleep. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Face Without a Mark.

So Gardiner, Me.—"Last spring my face began to break out with red pimples and after washing would be dry and scaly. Some of the pimples would have a white head and others would be purple red. They would itch and burn and I was distracted with the discomfort. I was a sight and could not sleep nights.

"I tried a number of remedies but my face grew worse. I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment but they did not do any good. At last I remembered of my mother using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment with good success, so I thought I would try them. I sent for a sample and even the first trial did me so much good I at once got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of the Cuticura Ointment and began to use them. I washed my face with hot water and Cuticura Soap, then applied the Cuticura Ointment. The relief was immediate. I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and in six weeks my face was entirely even a mark." (Signed) Mrs. M. L. Joy, Feb. 23, 1914.

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Latest happenings lend more encouragement to those who expect a revival of stock trading and general trade soon. Much of the gain so far has been in sentiment, but psychology is as important as ever. The steel trade became more active during last month, although war has practically eliminated export demand, and the decrease in idle cars indicating that more goods were being moved.

There is more talk about reopening stock exchanges. This is of some importance, as showing that conditions are bettering generally. It is believed that the foreign exchange market at present somewhat influenced by uncertainty as to the $3,000,000 gold pool plan.

EXTENDING BOND TRADING.

It is believed in some quarters that the action of the committee representing New York investment bankers in sending forth a letter authorizing dealers to place securities with their customers without disturbing the call money loan situation foreshadowed a desire by important interests to "clear the shelves of dealers in preparation for handling the $100,000,000 loan of the city of New York.

The committee warns dealers not to do anything to foster speculative operations, or to convey the impression that the market is at all active. It states that prices should conform to the spirit which has prevailed recently. "Recognizing the support which banks and other lenders of money have given to dealers in securities it should be the policy of dealers, whenever securities are sold, to apply the proceeds to the liquidation of loans."

REOPENING TALK IN LONDON.

Word comes from London that there is an increasing demand for reopening of the stock exchanges there, and rumor says business may be resumed in October. This is of great interest on this side of the Atlantic, as it is very likely that New York will await London's lead. No intimation as to the date of resumption followed the meeting of the London stock exchange committee, but it is expected by the British metropolis that an abbreviated official list of quotations will be issued shortly, giving the prices of gilt-edged issues only. This would be an important step and indicate that conditions are becoming more normal.

There is very little demand for money there at present, owing to war brakes upon trade and the plentiful supply. Although discount rates are 3½ per cent. below the Bank of England's minimum, there is no intention of reducing the latter. It is likely to be kept at 5 per cent. as long as London feels the need of protecting its gold resources.

PRESIDENT WILSON AND ROADS.

In railroad circles satisfaction is general over President Wilson's letter to Chairman Trumbull of the Chesapeake & Ohio board. In this communication, which was occasioned by the request of railway chiefs that he say something to help sustain credits of the carriers, Mr. Wilson says: "I am glad to do so, because I think the need very real."

STILL CONSIDERING GOLD PLAN.

The Federal Reserve Board is still deliberating upon the proposal to have the banks of this country raise $150,000,000 in gold to reestablish the foreign exchange market, and no report is expected until clearing house associations throughout the country have all needed data as to the amount of such money held here. But bankers have reported to the board that foreign exchange conditions are much improved already.

HOPEFUL TRADE SIGNS.

Not only are reports as to the financial situation encouraging, but there are evidences that business is obtaining a better footing. For the last fortnight of August idle freight cars on American and Canadian railways decreased 5,813. This shows that more products are in transit. The American Railway Association reports that the net car surplus on September 1 was the smallest since April 1. That the steel industry is picking up is shown by the report of the United States Steel Corporation that its unfilled orders increased 54,742 tons during August to 4,213,231. New orders booked in that month exceeded shipments by about 3,100 tons.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

Chancellor Lloyd George is expected to shortly raise $75,000,000 more as a war fund by the issue of treasury bills.

Governors of the New York Consolidated Exchange have decided to reopen the petroleum department for dealings in the certificates of pipeline companies.

Up to the close of business on September 8 the amount of emergency currency called for totalled $-56,170,000

Working people are banking money to an impressive extent. In thirty-three working days up to September 8 last newsdeposits in the New York postal savings bank aggregated $1,209,262.

ILLINOIS MAY LEGALIZE THE BOXING GAME

By JACK CONWAY.

Boxing lovers in Illinois are going to make another strenuous effort to legalize the glove game in that State this year. A movement is already under way to place a bill in the Legislature the coming Winter. It will call for ten-round, no-decision bouts such as are held in New York, Wisconsin and other States where the boxing game is fostered.

The boxing leaders of Illinois have a new plan for securing the passage of a boxing bill. They do not intend to ask the State authorities to permit any person who wishes to do so to organize a club provided the boxing bill is passed. They plan to limit boxing to Chicago for the first six months that the bill is in force and to allow but one club, which is to be in charge of Jimmy Coffroth of California, who is recognized as the leading static promoter in the United States. Coffroth would receive a salary and a percentage of the gate receipts. The residue would be turned over to the State.

It is believed that Coffroth would be able to put boxing on a firm basis in Illinois. He has been connected with the sport for many years and has staged scores of championship battles. He would be the right man to prove that boxing bouts properly conducted are not a menace to the community.

When (as recently passed a bill providing that contests and "exhibitions" in Illinois believe that they have the sport firmly intrenched. The bill will go through the Senate of the State Legislature and be signed by the Governor.

BATTLING JIM JOHNSON, the giant Tennessee negro, who meets Sam Langford in a twelve-round bout at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night, is preparing for the tussle at Atlantic City. Johnson is confident that he will be able to carry the Cambridge negro along at a merry clip. These two men recently met in New York and Langford had the best of the going after ten hard rounds of fighting. Johnson is a giant of flesh and bone. He is well over 6 feet in height, while weighs 225 pounds. Consequently he will have his work cut out for him. Langford, however, is a firm believer in Bob Fitzsimmons' old adage which said that the bigger they are the harder they fall. Samuel has had some pretty big men during and career in the ring, but has usually managed to finish in front.

JOHNSON is not unknown to the "fans" in this city. He exchanged blows with "Porky" Flynn at the Atlas Club early in the Summer and lost the decision. Johnson was beaten on points, but was not even on the level of it by the referee's decision. The third man in the ring presented Johnson from landing many blows in the clinches, but several of the rounds were cut short when the husky negro was scoring with heavy punches.

FRANKIE BURNS and Joe Azevedo have been matched to box at Oakland, Cal. Both boys are big favorites in California and it is expected that the contest will prove a good drawing card. Azevedo recently fought Charley White of Chicago, but the contest was stopped in the eighteenth round when Azevedo was completely out. Land on the verge of a k.

THE glove game is receiving some hard knocks out on the Coast. This is partly the fault of the promoters, who have been trying to hold bouts between second-raters and advertise them as world's championship affairs, only to flop on its. The Kill-or-Cure Club, Coffroth and Rivers-Heecher skirmishes were all called off. Of the three the only one which was a good match was the one between Kilbane and Dundee. It was staged at both men would weigh in at the featherweight limit of 122 pounds, but in a was probably given out for entertaining purposes as both Kilbane and Dundee have been fighting well above the 122-pound time.

THE bout between Chip and Murray would have been a one-sided affair if Chip had not knocked out Murray out. and would probably be able to do this again. Murray is only a fair second rater and has not any license to exchange punches with the leading men in his boxing division.

THE Rivers-Heecher bout looked poor from the start. Rivers is not a champion or even a near champion, but possesses sufficient class to lick some of a boxer of Heecher's shy, provided that he does a little training. Joe, however, dennises the matter of the training camp and when he does generally known that I was enjoying life instead of doing road work and boxing his sparring partners the Los Angeles promoters CALIFORNIANS have witnessed so many battles between real fighters that they refuse to separate themselves from real money to see two second raters. The sooner the promoters realize this the better it will be for all concerned.

Three prizes, consisting of solid gold, silver and bronze watch fobs, will be given in each event.

The football teams of Divisions 7 and 8 of the Carmen's Union will clash on this date, and this event will interest many people because the result between these two teams is decidedly keen.

One of the most interesting features of this field day will be the contest for the title of champion of the girls' baseball teams for the metropolitan district, between the Dimick girls' baseball team and the Forest Hill A. A. girls' baseball team.

Addresses will be made by Lieutenant-Governor Barry, State Treasurer Mansfield, Attorney-General Boynton and other prominent public officials.

Golf Experts Watch Younger Ouimet in Woodland Tourney

Good matches were in evidence at Woodland this morning in the first round of the three-day Fall amateur meeting. Despite the fact that Francis Ouimet dropped out after leading the field of 110 yesterday, there was considerable interest in the play, as his younger brother, Raymond, is a comer, and after winning the schoolboy title this Spring showed signs of imitating his big brother's success against the "big men" players.

The draw was not a very even one and as the result the best matches of the tourney are very liable to be those completed today.

The first flight played without handicaps and the second and third divisions used their usual State allowances.

Connelly Wins Mat Bout from McPhee

Pat Connelly won over Scotty McPhee in straight falls in the catch-as-catch-can wrestling match at the Grand Opera House. Connelly was too heavy and strong for the Scot, and had he been a little more clever could have won much quicker than he did. Each fall was secured by applying a reverse front nelson. It took Pat 26½ minutes to get the first and 12¾ minutes for the second.

Nervous Periodical Headaches

Succumb to Anti-Kamnia Tablets

This trouble commonly called "sick headache," is said to be due to the retention of urea in the system. Often it is stated that a poor condition of the blood is a cause of these headaches, or that it is a nervous condition, and in certain cases no doubt this is true.

Where treatment is demanded, it is more for the pain than anything else, and Dr A. F. Schellenbrandt of Louisville has found Anti-Kamnia Tablets to give prompt and satisfactory relief. "Rest should be insisted upon," he says, "and the patient should go to bed, darken the room, and all the attendants and family should be as quiet as possible. An emetic will sometimes shorten the attack. The bowels should be kept open with Calotabs, a hot bath and a thorough rub-down with a coarse towel often gives grateful relief. Two Anti-kamnia Tablets when the first signs appear will usually prevent the attack. During an attack, take two tablets every hour or two will shorten the attack and relieve the usual nausea and vomiting." These tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They are also unexcelled for nervous headaches, neuralgia and all pains.

BRAVES' NEW SLAB ARTIST IS A VETERAN

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 11.—The addition of Pitcher Tom Hughes to the Braves' roster gives them one more man who is over thirty.

Hughes, who has worked for Miracle Man Stallings before, celebrated his thirtieth birthday on January 29 last. His birthplace was Coal Creek.

"Long Tom" ... almost became a ... but before ... was ... for the New York Yankees in 1910, the only thing that prevented him from gaining ... distinction being that his teammates ... used to procure for him ... kine ... with which to w...

Pitching against Cleveland on August 3, 1910, Hughes held the Naps hitless for nine rounds, allowed them two hits but no runs the tenth and then in the eleventh weakened so that the Shoans got five swats and five tallies.

George Kahler, now with the Cleveland American association team, opposed Hughes in this event and won, 5 to 4.

FIVE SHUTOUTS THIS YEAR.

Hughes has pitched five shutouts for the Broncos this year and on four occasions has limited his opponents to a pair of safeties. The team the new Brave has blanked have been Montreal, twice, Baltimore, twice, and Newark, once.

His two-hit games were pitched against Newark, on May 8; Montreal, on July 3, and Baltimore, on August 1 and August 15.

Manager Gansel has lifted Hughes out of eight combats this year, but only once has relieved him because he was going badly.

Providence knocked Hughes off the rubber on August 20, the Clam Diggers making eight runs off him in three innings.

OPPONENTS HIT FOR .217.

In 20 innings of mound work this season Hughes has held his opponents to a batting average of .217, allowed them 164 hits, which were good for 8 runs; fanned 139, walked 61, hit eight and made 3 wild pitches.

Thrice this season Hughes has fanned 10 men, once he fanned 9 and once he fanned 8.

The first time Hughes reached double figures in strikeouts was on April 28 against Baltimore, Enright, who will be one of Hughes' teammates in Boston, pitching for the Birds.

During his entire professional career, extending from 1905 to date, Hughes has won 147 games and lost 114. The best season he had was in 1911 in Atlanta. There, with Jimmy Lavender as his backstop, Hughes led the hurlers of the Southern Association with 26 victories and only 8 defeats.

Lajeune Joins Pirates.

ATLANTIC CITY, Ia., Sept. 11.—Larry Lajeune, the leading batter of the Western League and a star of the Sioux City outfield, has been sold to the Pittsburgh National League team.

MITCHELL'S SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

THINGS grow brighter for the Braves day by day. This week, starting on even terms with the Giants in the matter of games won and lost, our team has scored five victories and two defeats, while the Giants have won twice and lost four games.

Since the week opened the Braves have also gained on the Cubs and Cards so much that things are very satisfactory in the Boston camp.

ON account of the general liking of the Phillies to left-handed twirling with Lauderus out of the lineup nearly all of them are right handed batters who take the full swing. Manager Stallings deems it advisable to keep Lauderus out of the double-header yesterday, although following the rotation of Rudolph, Tyler and James, it was Tyler's turn to pitch.

Instead Stalling shoved James in to second game, although he had pitched against the Giants on Tuesday. The selection was well made, as it turned out, for James had a comfortable easy time of it, the Phillies being able to connect with his delivery only in the third round.

THE runs scored by the Phillies in that session gave them a total of one run, the score being 1 to 1 when the inning closed. But in the sixth the Braves put over a "big inning," driving out three hits, putting four tallies over the plate and sending Marshall to the shower bath.

AFTER that the Phillies didn't care whether school kept or not. They simply gave up the ghost and refused to take subsequent doings seriously.

It was a very easy, but none the less welcome, win for the Braves, made especially sweet when the final score of the second Brooklyn game went up on the Board showing that Mowrey's men had dropped another contest to the lowly Dodgers.

THE pitching of Rudolph and James in the double-header was good enough to win from any two men in the world—and this is how the Athletics Rudolph was especially effective. He knew how to use the heavy sluggers from start to finish and they only got a couple of safe swats off his delivery.

Stallings is working his pitchers with a rare knack. On the only time he has really hesitated was on Tuesday, when he could have sent a new one before deciding to send James after the third New York game. The reason was that the big pitcher had dropped off in weight and was not feeling quite himself. But he went through in style and put a victory to his credit.

The style of delivery that James uses does not take very much out of him and thus he can be used often without ill effect to himself.

IT is a wonder to the patrons of the Braves' games how Rudolph can stand the pace as he is such a little fellow with seemingly no strength to ... The answer is that ... a long head ... and uses ... brain ... he does ... he pitched yesterday ... Phillies game only ... for him ... his usual two days ... he is as good as ever.

THE fans are still ... George Tyler ... Stallings ... yesterday. Fred Mitchell ... who is the ... agers ... and Lee ... ging him to pitch ... for the past ... of the ...

PHILLIES MAKE LAST STAND TODAY TO HOLD WINNING BRAVES IN LAST OF GAMES

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

RED SOX OUT TO CAPTURE FINAL GAME OF THE SERIES TODAY FROM ATHLETICS

BRAVES SAFELY HOLDING LEAD IN FLAG RACE

Boston battlers win, the margin would be three games and a half.

Once the Braves get that far ahead, the flag will be theirs to all intents and purposes. With Tearney and Matty the only reliable pair the Giants have working right, it is a most a foregone conclusion that the Cubbers, with their star staff of four twirlers all working well, and a half dozen reservists waiting the call will come down to the final wire with it flying high.

BRAVES SHOW REAL WORTH.

Yesterday's double clean-up stamped the Braves as a ball team all the way through. Both battles were tight, hard fought games, in both games the leaders came through with the run that meant ultimate victory.

The team is getting better with every day that passes, while the Giants and the Cubs, with their veteran material, are slowing down.

The wild impetus of the Braves seems to have stopped the other contenders. The Cubs are now five games to the rear and almost hopelessly out of it. The Giants' hurlers, save those before mentioned have shown no signs of coming back to personal form. McGraw will have to resort to desperate measures to get back into the running. The Cubs with a good margin and four less games to play than the Braves have the hardest kind of an uphill battle to get in the running.

Looks now like President Gaffney might as well start making his world's series arrangements.

WELL FIXED FOR PITCHERS.

For today's battle, Manager Stallings has a whole flock of pitchers itching for a chance to get into battle. While the Quakers are proverbially strong against southpaw pitching, nevertheless, it looks like a pipe for Dana would be served up this afternoon. George Tyler has warmed up once the last two battles, as has also Paul Strand. According to Stallings' line Tyler youngster is due to work a game very shortly, and unless "Bucky George" feels fit, today is very likely to be the day.

If, however, a right-hander is deemed best, Crutcher or Oeschger are on the waiting list. The former has invariably performed finely on the late visits, while the latter, if he can get to going well, be a tough nut for the Phillies to crack. He held down the Doolin derelicts over in Shawtown last week and a repetition of the same performance would be most welcome just about now.

Nap Rucker, who participated in one of the Giant downfalls a short time back, is listed to oppose the mighty Matty in the Dodger engagement today. If he can stop the McGraws there will be a lot of joy in the Boston camp.

LAST OF QUAKERS TODAY.

As this afternoon's fray winds up the stay of the Quakers in these parts, the Braves, with three victories apiece so far to their credit already, cannot be beaten on the entire series by the present enemy. The Giants, even though Matty comes through, cannot do better than get an even break against Ebbetts and company.

After today's battles the Dodgers come to Boston for a four-days' stay, while the Philadelphia sluggers jaunt over to New York and the Polo Grounds.

For the sake of reference, here's how the leaders are listed going into this afternoon's battles:

Braves	73	54
Giants	69	58	2½ games
Cubs	69	61	5 games

Yesterday both Bill James and Dick Rudolph showed that they were in just as good fettle as ever, despite the gruelling program that has been theirs for the past few weeks. The team, too, displayed the old kick. Both games were pulled out in mad smashes at the finish.

That's why George Stallings and a few million Boston fans, more or less are satisfied that the gaily days of October will see the Braves battling with the Athletics, or the Red Sox, as the case may be.

Attacked, Then Loses Memory

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Mystery surrounds the case of a young man who reached here from New York suffering loss of memory. The man, who is believed to be a medical specialist preparing to sail for the European war zone, knows nothing concerning himself previous to a week ago, when he says he was assaulted and robbed at Coney Island.

Saginaw-Bay City in Pennant Series

SAGINAW, Mich., Sept. 11.—Saginaw and Bay City will meet in a best-of-seven series to decide which club in the champion of the South Michigan League. The pennant race was divided into two parts. Bay City led when the first half of the season ended, and Saginaw clinched the leadership for the last half. The regular season will close Sunday.

RED SOX OUT TO GET EVEN WITH MACKS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—The Athletics and Red Sox, leaders and runners-up in the great American League pennant fight, meet today in the final game of their series, and as it stands one all both clubs are out to gain the upper hand.

The Boston boys have it on the Mackmen for the season and from past performances seem probable winners today, but yesterday's conflict in which the Red Sox were routed to the tune of 8 to 1, has boosted the stock of the White Elephants and they are more than even favorites with the betting fraternity.

The second game of the series looked pretty good for Boston with Foster in the box, but the Athletics showed a great big bunch of their swatting powers and before the game was three-quarters over the challengers were all up in the air and got a soft spot to fall on.

The Athletics peppered Foster viciously, making fourteen hits, everybody accepting Baker sharing in the prosperity.

Oldring, popularity contest winner took the heart out of the fans with two sashling long distance swats. His triple and home run really were responsible for Foster's wrecking.

McInnis another gainer of an auto has helped in the run-making with two singles and a pass.

Raymond Bresser, who did the honors for the Mackmen, was a visitor to Carrigan and his crew. He fanned eight and allowed seven hits. A double and a single in the first inning saved the Red Sox from a shutout.

PHILLIES PLAY FINAL AGAINST BRAVES TODAY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

We shall be pleased to see our Braves sweep the field with the Phillies in the final game of the series this afternoon. The battle begins at 3 o'clock. The score sheet now reads: Braves—won 3; lost 1. Phillies—won 2; lost 3.

Picking the pitchers for Stallings is a somewhat tough proposition as, according to the Boston manager, he doesn't know this morning who will pitch for his side.

If it were not for the fact that the Phillies are supposed to be partial to left-handed pitchers we would say that George Tyler would be given a chance to make up for the game he lost to the Giants on Monday.

It may be that Stallings will come back with Gene Cocreham, who got off to a bad start on Tuesday and lasted only a part of the first inning. That Gene can pitch good ball against the Phillies was demonstrated in the Quaker City last week.

As for the visitors, it is possible that Mayer will be asked by Manager Doolin to fool the Braves. But whoever is selected, the boys will not scare. Alexander is out of the way, the others all look alike. If Mayer doesn't go in Rixey may do so.

With a fine lead of two and one-half games over the Giants, the Braves feel that nothing can now stop them. If things keep on, the Boston players, in a few days, will begin to seriously consider how they will invest their world's series money.

Western Games Go as Double Headers

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—American League clubs will this month play off in the Western cities games which were not played when the Western clubs made their last swing through the East.

Ten games were halted on the last Eastern trip, so ten double-headers will be necessary unless open dates can be utilized. The Red Sox have postponements to play off with Chicago and Detroit.

RIVAL BIKERS' FIGHT FORCES LAWRENCE OUT

That the "revenge race" at the Revere Beach track tomorrow evening has been well named is shown in the many demands made by the two big rivals, Carman and Walthour.

In their latest communication to Manager Butler, the scratching of Percy Lawrence's name from the list of starters has been asked on the ground that he was not in the championship race which Carman won and is now disputed by Walthour.

Lawrence has been advertised to ride, together with Wiley and Metzen, both of whom were in the title race. Lawrence was taking the place of Moran who will be unable to appear, and it was only after a long delay that he consented to withdraw.

The question of paymasters has also brought on a snag and the fans may be treated to an added event, as Reuben who is one of the big favorites in the race has challenged Stein, his nearest rival, to a test of speed on the motors and the latter has accepted.

The big race will be for an hour and the men have agreed to let everything count but each man insists on having his own scorer who will work in conjunction with the official scorer.

A special card of amateur and professional events will be run off previous to the big motor-paced event.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

QUESTIONS OF PROPRIETY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I know several people to whom I have never been introduced, since I have met them in business. Would it be proper for me to introduce them to my friends when I myself have not been introduced? I have an engagement with a young man for a certain evening. At the time I made the engagement I did not know that on that evening I was to be at home alone. Shall I ask this young man to call another night or shall I let him come as planned? S. M. R.

IT is generally best for a girl to keep her business and social life separate. However, if you meet your business acquaintances do not slight them by failing to introduce them to your other friends. I trust you are a sufficiently dignified, self-respecting girl to be able to entertain a caller in your own home without impropriety, even though you do happen to be unchaperoned. In general, though, try to make engagements for evenings when some of your family will be at home.

THE INVITATION SHOULD COME FROM THE MOTHER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young man for the last six months. He has asked me many times to spend an evening at his mother's house. Is it proper for me to go with him, and when introduced must I shake hands with the members of his family? He has mother, father, sisters and brothers. J. E. S.

THIS young man shows a very fine feeling for you in wanting you to meet his mother, but the invitation should come from his mother, so you should be assured of a welcome. In meeting his relatives be cordial and pleasant. It would be a gracious courtesy to hold out your hand in greeting.

LATE HOURS!

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I attended an engagement party on July 2, and left said party at 1:30 a. m., and the people who gave the party were highly insulted at my action, saying that I should have waited until lunch was served. Do you think me at fault for what I have done?

E. A. R.

NO man who attends seriously to business can afford to stay at parties even as late as the hour you mention. Refreshments should be served before midnight. If you said a courteous good-night to your hosts you have nothing with which to reproach yourself.

Civilizing Cherry

By STELLA FLORES

Copyright, 1911, International News Service

A LITTLE maid, with masses of copper-gold curls, sat on the big rock, daintily feeding a school of greedy fishes. At her side a great deer stood, still as a statue. Slowly, as if impelled by an unseen force, she lifted her eyes—and looked full into the interested gaze of a handsome stranger. In quick confusion she sprang to her feet. The deer sped away like an arrow—the fishes were gone.

But it was a lady who spoke. A wonderfully dressed lady, with a pretty, rather spoiled face. "Can you tell me where I can find the home of Cherry Page?" she asked. "Yes, indeed," smiled the girl, "for I am Cherry."

The wonder of wonders had happened! Uncle Ben's wife had offered to take Cherry to the city. If they liked each other she was to stay indefinitely. And she could learn all kinds of wonderful things! Then a telegram came, and she hurried back to the city, leaving her brother, the dark-eyed stranger, to pilot the little country maid to the big city.

Yes, it hurt to say good-by to her mother, but she smiled brightly, For Cherry came of brave people, and well she knew that there was little enough money left to provide comfortably for her mother alone. And handsome, thoughtless Ned watched with a sympathetic frown. "She's a little thoroughbred," he said to himself.

Constance, Face to Face with Ralph, Laughs at His Idea of Personal Honor

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XLIX.

FOR a moment nobody spoke. Then as the burning paper turned to gray ashes Ralph Morton looked at his host.

"Forgive me, sir," he said. "It is better so. You see—Tom is my cousin, and"—with a break in his voice—"I once loved him and trusted him."

John Hale held out his hand. "You are a noble man, Ralph," he replied huskily. "I seem never to have known you until now."

"I am not noble, sir," Ralph protested, returning the cordial handclasp, but dropping his eyes before the frank admiration in the gaze of the other man. "It is only what any fellow would have done. Why, Edith," his tone changing to tenderness as he glanced at his betrothed, "why, little girl, what are you crying about?"

He put his arm about her and drew her to him, glad, perhaps, of an excuse to let go of his host's honest hand. The host himself looked away hastily. He might be willing to acknowledge that he had been mistaken in this man's character, might be willing to accept him as his daughter's suitor—but that father does not exist who does not feel a chill of repulsion when, for the first time, he sees his best-beloved child in the arms of the man who is to take her away from him.

Edith gazed up into her lover's eyes. "I'm silly to cry, I suppose, she whispered, "but you are so fine, so splendid!"

Mrs. Hale's matter-of-fact accents broke in upon the sentimentality of the occasion. "Nevertheless," she said, with cold practicality, "I think that we have a right to know what was in that letter."

"I am sorry, my dear Mrs. Hale," rejoined Ralph, releasing Edith and replying to her mother's suggestion, "but I cannot tell anyone what was in that letter. If Tom dies"—he paused as if the idea were painful to him—"nobody must ever know what he wrote me. If he lives—I cannot betray his secret. Had he not had this providence, matters would have been different, for then he could have faced us all, if need be, and defended himself. As it is, he was not allowed to carry out his designs. To tell what they were would be to punish him and—another—for what did not happen."

OTHER PERSON IN SECRET.

"And that 'other' was—whom?" Mrs. Hale insisted. "Do you mean to intimate that my niece knows the contents of that letter?"

John Hale looked at his wife in surprise. He thought he understood her every mood, but until now he had never seen her when one of her own sex whom she loved and had trusted was accused of that which was degrading to her womanhood.

"Martha, my dear," he protested, "this is not the kind of matter of which you wish to hear more. Personally, I have heard and seen enough to convince me, against my will, that we have been mistaken in the character of the niece you love."——

He stopped abruptly, for the door opened quietly and Constance stood before them. For months afterward John Hale could not erase from his memory the girl's face and attitude as she stood looking from one to the other of the group. She had put on a black street dress—for she still wore mourning—and the soft black tulle that filled in the open triangle at the throat accentuated her clear pallor.

Her deep gray eyes seemed larger and darker than usual because of the shadowy rings around them—rings caused by long hours of sleeplessness. Her chestnut hair was coiled low at the back of her shapely head, and her lips drooped slightly at the corners, giving a plaintive, pensive expression to the sensitive mouth.

She resembled strangely a well-known presentment of Joan of Arc by an Italian sculptor. Any one gazing at her would have found it difficult to believe that a smirch of scandal could ever touch this refined creature. Yet as her glance rested upon Ralph the soft lines of her mouth hardened and she took a step toward her uncle.

"I knocked, but you did not hear me," she said simply. "I waited upstairs for you to send for me, but as you did not do so I have taken the liberty of coming unsummoned. May I speak with you alone—at least"—with a catch in her breath—"with only aunt present?"

The usually sweet and tarinante voice was this morning a dull monotone. Any compunction that had seized John Hale as he saw the solitary and pathetic figure in the doorway was exhausted by surprised disapproval by his speech.

TEMPER NOT IMPROVED.

"I think," he said coldly, "that your temper has not been improved by a night of reflection if you can still cherish such anger against your cousin and her betrothed that you ask me to send them out of your presence."

The retort went straight home, but Constance had steeled herself to maintain a dogged calm. "I only meant uncle," she explained, "that I prefer telling my plans to those who are truly interested in me. May I see you alone?"

Mrs. Hale rose from her chair. "I am sorry, Constance," she said, with an effort to speak sternly, "that you are angry with Edith. She, poor child, was very unhappy about you last night."

"I am sorry I made anybody unhappy last night," Constance rejoined, still in an emotionless tone. "I did not intend to do so."

"Constance!" her aunt appealed to her suddenly and impulsively. "What did you intend to do last night, I don't want to believe what I've heard"——

But John Hale interposed before his wife could say more. "If you please, Martha," he said with dignity, "I prefer that you leave this matter with me. I know enough already to prove to you that Constance has deceived us. If you will leave her with me now, she and I will come to an understanding. Perhaps," with a significant look at the black-clad figure, "I may then hear from her that which Ralph's nobility has prevented his telling us, her assignation with Tom last night."

The flood of crimson that sprang to the accused girl's face retreated as quickly, leaving her paler than before. "What do you mean?" she demanded, turning swiftly upon Ralph. "What do you mean, I say?"

"My lips are sealed by a sense of honor," the man said significantly.

The reply struck a blaze of wrath from what had seemed a moment before like the flint of this girl's composure. She smote her hands sharply together.

"Honor!" she exclaimed. "Honor—from you!"

And as she saw the malignant gleam in the man's eyes she burst into a scornful laugh.

Knew the Answer

In a country school the teacher was trying to make the lesson as interesting as possible to her class of little ones.

"Now, children," she said, "you have named all the domestic animals but one. Who can tell us what that one is?"

There was no reply.

"What?" exclaimed the teacher, "does no one know? What animal has bristly hair, is dirty all the time, and loves getting into the mud?"

A small boy raised a timid hand.

"Well, Allan," said the teacher, "tell us what it is."

"Please ma'am," said the little boy, reflectively, "it's me."

What science teaches about keeping homes healthy

Scientific experiments have shown how dangerous sweeping is.

An exposed plate was left in a room before sweeping. After five minutes, only 75 bacteria were found on it. In the same room, after sweeping, 2700 bacteria were deposited on the plate in five minutes.

This proves (what every scientist knows) that millions of bacteria collect in every room. They settle on floors, woodwork, furniture, etc. Sweeping only moves them around. It doesn't clean the room.

The right way to clean floors, woodwork, etc.

The right way to clean house—to keep the whole house healthful, in fact—is to pour a few drops of Sylpho-Nathol into every pail of water used for mopping, scrubbing, cleaning, etc.

This will cause you no more work than you go to now, and it will make the home hygienically clean from top to bottom.

You go through the motions of cleaning anyway. The only difference is that, without disinfecting, all your labor is fruitless, except so far as looks are concerned.

All disinfectants not alike

A strong disinfectant should be in every home. It belongs there as much as soap and water. There are several good preparations on the market, but it is safest to take one endorsed by medical authorities.

The United States Public Health Marine Hospital Service (which lists Sylpho-Nathol on its Requisition Table of Supplies) has shown in a bulletin that many so-called disinfectants are so weak that they are practically worthless.

Whenever a substitute is offered for Sylpho-Nathol, do not accept it. Substitutes are offered because there is more profit in selling them, and because they can trade successfully on the thirty years' reputation of Sylpho-Nathol.

The Art of Dressing

THE FOLLY OF WEARING FINERY TO WORK

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

No. III.

ONE of the prettiest girls I know made the blunder of coming down to her place of employment recently dressed in a ruffled white silk that would have been suitable for a garden party. At a garden party she would have been a delight to the eye. In a business office she was an offense.

Uncle writes me the following: "I have nowhere to go after I leave work. I have very few friends, as I am a stranger alone in the city. There are some nice girls and young men in my office. So instead of getting party clothes for which I have no use, I get pretty things to wear to work. And the other day one of the girls told me that she took a dislike to me because I had worn such fancy dresses to work.

"I like jewelry and I have all that belonged to my mother. I have been wearing a necklace and two pins, some jeweled hair pins, rings, a bracelet and a watch to work. And I like low-necked muslin dresses better than suits and shirtwaists. Am I doing anything wrong to dress to please myself?"

My dear girl, you are making a grave blunder. Wear simple linen or pongee or taffeta dresses to work if you can afford to dress as you choose. But have them made on simple tailored or shirtwaist lines. And don't wear an entire collection of jewelry. It makes what is probably genuine and good look cheap and ordinary, you will not make friends by over-dressing. In fact, you will spoil the best of the girls and young men in your office by the very means you are using to attract.

Fluffy muslins and organdies and laces are not suitable for business. At the end of a day's work they look crushed and soiled and rumpled. But trim tailored effects stand the strain of a day in a dusty office, and the heat and humidity of a city's streets do not take all the freshness from them.

The business woman should look neat and business-like. The effect she cannot produce with jewels and chiffon.

Fancy finery has a wilted look that is never charming.

Wear simple, workmanlike clothes to work. Don't try to be conspicuous for the attention you attract will probably be unfavorable.

A simple hat on girlish lines and a simple blouse of the same sort almost always become a young woman. Clothes of this type will give you a look of neatness and trimness that will attract men and women alike.

The woman who is modestly dressed need never feel unpleasantly noticeable. She has a look of simple modesty that attracts everyone.

At a recent dance where there were many Paris gowns, no one looked more charming than a young girl who wore a little white crepe de chine dress with no ornament beyond white organdie vest and collar and cuffs. It had cost $12 and was serving as her "best" Summer dress, and her escort seemed very proud of her girlish daintiness. At the end of the evening, when chiffons and laces were mussed and wrinkled, the wearer of the simple white frock looked as cool and dainty as when she had come.

The girl who is overdressed, however, has a self-conscious, arrogant appearance that does not attract kindly admiration. If she gets praise it is the grudging sort that wonders how she can afford to dress so elaborately on her salary.

Don't go to work or on a day's excursion to river or shore in a filmy dress that will come home looking sadly draggled and limp. Wear simple tailored clothes that can stand a day of dust and heat and dampness. Don't go to dances in starchy linens that will muss and crumple during the evening and make you look warm and uncomfortable.

His Picture

Young Hibbard was exhibiting some photographs to a charming society girl, with whom he was very much in love.

"This one," he said, handing her a picture, "is my photo with my two French poodles. Can you recognize me?"

"Why, yes, I think so," replied the young woman, looking intently at the picture. "You are the one with the hat on, are you not?"

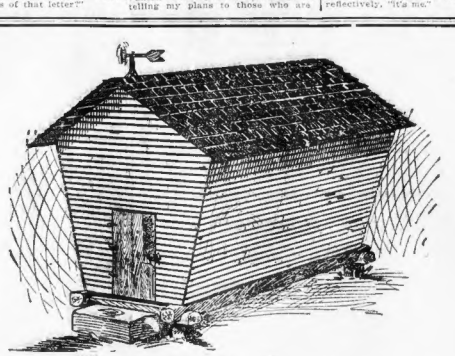
To Put On Flesh And Increase Weight

A Physician's Advice.

Most thin people eat from four to six pounds of good, solid, fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump, chunky folks eat very light and keep gaining all the time. It's all bosh to say that this is the nature of the individual. It isn't Nature's way at all.

Thin folks stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They just absorb enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a semblance of health and strength. Stuffing won't help them. A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a single "day there" pound. All the fat-producing elements of their food just stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. What such people need is something that will prepare these fatty food elements so that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body—something, too, that will multiply their red blood corpuscles and increase their blood's nourishing power.

For such a condition I always recommend eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is not, as is a scientific combination of six of the most effective and powerful flesh building elements known to chemistry. It is absolutely harmless, yet wonderfully effective, and a single tablet eaten with each meal often has the effect of increasing the weight of a thin man or woman from three to five pounds a week. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere on a positive guarantee of weight increase or money back.



True Toasted Corn

Is as different from commonplace corn flakes, as succulent green sweet corn is different from the hard, flinty, yellow grain of the farmer's corn crib.

In spite of the numerous "corn flakes" marketed, few persons really know the rich sweetness of choice corn when skilfully cooked, flavoured and toasted.

This true toasted corn—distinctive in its rich, rare flavour—is called

Post Toasties

A call for "corn flakes" often brings some one of the many brands of ordinary flakes. To avoid disappointment ask for, and insist upon Post Toasties.

This food can be distinguished by the original yellow package; by the rich, true corn flavour imprisoned in the making; and by the size and tender crispness of the golden brown flakes.

Toasties are ready to serve hot or cold, with cream or good milk—also with fresh fruit in season. A further delicate flavour may be released by heating a few minutes in oven before serving. And it's a flavour worth knowing!

POTATOES TAKE 10-CENT DROP IN THE MARKETS

Since the Maine supply of potatoes reached the markets several days ago the price has dropped from 92 cents to 85 cents.

Peaches are much in evidence, price varying with quality from 50 cents to $1.20 a basket. Damson plums for canning purposes are 40 cents a basket, little picking onions 15 cents a basket and pickle-size cucumbers are 75. Some fine large green tomatoes, firm enough for chili sauce and other relishes, are 6 cents a peck, and both yellow and red plum tomatoes are 10 cents a quart.

Sweet corn is to be had from 15 to 50 cents a dozen in great abundance; green peppers for stuffing are seven cents a pound and red peppers 10; both wax and string beans are seven cents, and shell beans seven and 10; cauliflower is 15 cents a head; turnips are three cents a pound and carrots four, sweet potatoes three, beets three, onions four and squash five.

Lettuce is still five cents a head and cucumbers six cents a piece, while cantaloupes are 10 and 15 cents. A few blueberries appear at 35 and 20 cents, and grapes of all sorts are plentiful at 5 cents a pound and 15 to 20 a basket. Celery can still be had for 10 cents. Limes are 25 cents a dozen and California oranges 25 and 40. Pears are 20 cents a dozen, and grapefruit is generally three for 25 cents. Pineapples average about 40 cents a peck.

Eggs are up to 45, 35, 32 and 28 cents a dozen, and fresh fowl may be had for 36 cents. Hams are lower by one cent a pound, being now 21 cents. Fowl is 25, rump steak 35, sirloin 25 to 35, the top of the round 28, and leg of lamb is 22 cents, with hind quarters the same, fore quarters 14, rib chops 28 and kidney chops 35.

Haddock is up to seven cents, and steak cod two pounds for 25, mackerel 20, Spanish mackerel 20, scup 15, salmon 28 and 35, smelts 25 and 40, gen base 15, eel 20, flounders 8 1-2, bake 12, turbot 15, bonita 12½, bluefish 13 and butterfish 10.

Girl Saves Friend from Asphyxiation

Miss Mary Noone, twenty, of No. 50 Elmwood street, Roxbury, owes her escape from death by asphyxiation to the relief work performed by her chum, Miss Mary Nee, of No. 6 Norwood avenue. Miss Nee walked into her friend's room and found it filled with gas and Miss Noone unconscious on the couch. She dragged the unconscious form of the girl to the window.

A War Which Cripples the Nations of Europe, Leaving Them Prostrate Before the Threat of Asiatic Aggression---Can It Not Be Stopped?

Mr. Hearst has sent the following cable dispatch to Lord Northcliffe, publisher of the London Times, and Lord Burnham, publisher of the London Daily Telegraph, two of the great English newspapers with which the Boston American is co-operating in the collection of war news:

To Lord Northcliffe,
Publisher London Times:

To Lord Burnham,
Publisher London Telegraph:

The war in Europe seems to us in America one of the most terrible and one of the most unreasonable things that has ever happened in the world.

Moreover, the war itself is to us not more terrible than the possible consequences of the war.

The disasters of the war, and the even greater disasters which may follow, affect England and America too. Both countries are sharers in the world's prosperity, in the world's progress, in the world's social development and in all the achievements of civilization.

The long continuance of the war means inevitably the destruction of a large proportion of civilized humanity. If the civilized races shall be largely destroyed, the world will be left to the less civilized races, and it is conceivable that civilization might again be submerged in an overwhelming inundation of barbarism.

The longer the war continues the more civilization will suffer, the more the European nations, which are the sponsors of civilization, will become exhausted and the more likely will be the eventual triumph of either militarism or Mongolism.

Truly, as Kipling says, "The Hun is at the gate," but the Hun comes not, nor ever has come, from Germany nor from any part of Europe, but will come, as he has come in the past, in successive, almost irresistible tides of invasion from the interior of Asia.

Wars are on ever greater scales, and the next war might be between all of Europe and all of Asia. Then, if Europe is sufficiently prostrate, it is within the bounds of possibility that the ideals and institutions of our Occidental civilization might fail of defence.

That is a fearful prospect for you as Englishmen and for us as Americans.

The only way surely to stop these appalling possibilities is promptly and positively to stop the war.

Can the war be stopped? I think it can.

I think both sides must be supremely horrified at the awful death and destruction of modern warfare.

I think the people of all countries must be realizing now, as they could not possibly have realized before the event, what illimitable calamities are occurring and impending.

I think the people of the nations can end this war, and end all wars.

I think the press can appeal to the people, to your people, to our people and to all other people as no other influence can. I believe that if the appeal is made now to the press of all nations, and by the press of all nations, the war can be stopped and will be stopped.

If it is not stopped, there may be more than war and worse than war. There may be riot and revolution and red anarchy in the centres of government and the relentless revenge of the outraged masses, resentful at their endless and needless sacrifice.

Will the press of England not join the press of America in an effort to avert these infinite calamities?

Can we not appeal to the people of our own countries, and to the press and people of all countries, to make one mighty, united effort to compel peace and restore happiness and civilized conditions to the people of the world?

O'er the Land of the Free

The celebration of the centennial of the Star Spangled Banner is being observed this week at Baltimore. Francis Scott Key's famous poem was written when the dawn of September 14, 1814, showed him the flag still flying over Fort McHenry after a bombardment by the British fleet.

The Mystery of Comets

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

I HAVE just received a bulletin from the Lick Observatory containing the latest orbits calculated for two of the new comets of 1914.

Perhaps the reader will say: "That doesn't interest me, I'll pass on."

But wait a moment, please.

It is true that these comets in themselves have no interest for you, unless you are an astronomer, because they are mere minnows in the ocean of space, and practically invisible to the naked eye. They will never scare anybody by brandishing flaming swords across the stars. They are not that kind of comets.

But they are like the little models of flying ships with whose aid students of aerodynamics (that characteristic science of the twentieth century) disentangle the laws and principles of aviation. The public never sees the models, but some morning it rubs its eyes at the spectacle of a new and wonderful air-car sailing serenely overhead with its load of passengers, guided and controlled with all the ease of an ocean liner, because its pilot has learned the secret from the models.

So the study that the astronomers are giving to the little comets, tracing all the vagaries of their movements in order to discover precisely the paths in which they are traveling, will one day enable them to predict the flight of some grand, terrifying monster of space with such accuracy that, if it be aimed but a hair's breadth aside, they can reassure us against the fear of a world-ending collision.

The general public has not the slightest notion of the amount of intellectual labor, of time, of patience, of care, of skill, of special knowledge, of trained imagination, of concentration of purpose and of mind, that is involved in the observation and calculation of the orbit pursued by some insignificant whiff of a comet that never comes nearer than a hundred million miles from the earth, and is never seen by one in a hundred million of the earth's inhabitants.

The President of the United States does not have a harder day's work than that of one of these devoted astronomers, and his work is far less intellectual. They are laying the foundations of future science. They are doing work whose final effect will be to lift all mankind to a higher level.

It is no mere paradox to say that the determination of a comet's orbit is a greater achievement than the winning of a battle.

Or that it has a greater influence on the future of humanity. It is one of the hardest things in the world to do. There are probably not more than a dozen comets whose orbits are known with even approximate accuracy. People who think they have performed a notable intellectual feat by winning a game of chess from a master of that kind of mental gymnastics, had better try to solve one of these mathematical problems in astronomy!

Yet in our day many women attack these problems—and solve them, too! Two or three of the greatest astronomers in the world, just now, are women in the bulletin to which I have referred. I observe that a woman has done half the work on one of the elusive orbits, and all of it on the other.

If the reader is disposed to take exception to the statement that the calculation of the orbits of comets has an enormous influence mentally chew awhile upon the two following facts, which nobody can deny: First, as long as man on the future of our race, let him remains in ignorance of the relations of the earth on which he dwells to the bodies that surround it in space, he is merely a child, intellectually, and is proportionately no farther advanced than the baby that takes the moon for a silver rattle and reaches out its hand to grasp it. Second, until we can calculate the movements of comets as certainly as we can those of the moon and the planets, our knowledge of the solar system, which is our home in the universe, can make no claim to completeness, for, while we have got rid of the ancient superstitions about comets, we still do not know whence they come, or whither many of them go.

Do they all travel in ellipses, or are the paths of some of them parabolas or hyperbolas? Upon the answer to that question depend issues that affect the highest intelligence of man.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

Boston is the leading wool market of America and annually imports 125,000,000 pounds of foreign wool? The Boston wool market in 1912 handled the astounding total of 130,601,660 pounds of wool.

New Deadly Devices of War

Man's wonderful genius for mechanical progress has been misdirected toward scientific slaughter and destruction.

Five years ago the prospect of a war in the air was regarded as a fantastic vision. Today it is a terrible reality.

Along a battle line of 300 miles aviators are in a death grapple with one another thousands of feet up in the air.

The war now raging in Europe has been to a remarkable extent a war of automobiles, armored and equipped with rapid fire guns.

Now Is the Time to Show That All Foreign Industries Can Be Set Up in America

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by Star Company.

ANXIETY is expressed by many horticulturists about the uncertainty of being able to obtain bulbs and plants from foreign markets.

It is to be hoped that American horticulturists will awaken to the fact that AMERICA CONTAINS NEARLY EVERY KIND OF CLIMATE AND SOIL WHICH CAN BE FOUND ANYWHERE IN THE WORLD AND THAT IN NO OTHER ONE COUNTRY ARE SUCH REMARKABLE FACILITIES FOR RAISING EVERY KIND OF FLOWER AS RIGHT HERE.

We have Southern California, with its mild, dry climate, and its glorious sunshine; Florida, with its tropical conditions; Texas, a perfect paradise for flower growing; and, in fact, we have everything needed to make America the most successful spot on the globe for the cultivation of all kinds of bulbs, plants, shrubs and flowers.

A Healthful Occupation

We have cold, hot, damp, dry, wet, temperate and intemperate climates and soil to correspond to each locality.

Horticulture is a beautiful and healthful occupation and gives employment to armies of men and women.

It seems incredible that American minds have been so dull and American enterprise has been so lax that our flower cultivators have been allowed to send abroad for their supplies so many years, thus depriving our own people of work and revenue in this agreeable industry—here in the home of the world's famous wizard of The Flower Kingdom, Luther Burbank.

This is but one of many industries which America should feel ashamed to have left to foreign lands to develop. The coloring and printing of postal cards has been relegated to Germany because that land supplies labor at small cost. Certain important chemicals used in the developing of moving picture films also come from Germany.

Unquestionably our chemists will rise to the occasion and produce all ingredients necessary to the continuance of this enormous moving picture enterprise.

No country in the world can produce men with better brains, quicker inspiration, greater enthusiasm, or more enduring working qualities than our American men possess.

Teaches Self-Reliance

This terrible world disaster should put our people on their mettle and teach them self-reliance and self-development.

With our gifted artists and our women of exquisite taste, we should establish a school of American fashions which will utterly eclipse in beauty and appropriateness anything which has ever emanated from France. America has not even begun to sound her own depths yet in any direction. Now is her opportunity.

There is a foolish cry sounding that American children must go toyless because we cannot import toys from foreign lands. Here is the opportunity for bright minds to create new ideas in the world of toydom, and here is an excellent chance for enterprising business concerns to busy themselves in manufacturing the inventors' ideas, at rates which will correspond to those formerly obtained from abroad.

At the present time America, a land of peace, ought to think of itself as a Robinson Crusoe on a shipwrecked island and busy itself creating everything necessary for comfort, beauty and pleasure. To the true American there has always been a sense of humiliation in buying goods bearing a foreign mark. Hereafter let our slogan be "Made in America!"
